DAILY PRESS LOWEST BIDDER ON CITY PRINTING

October Starts Out With Ninety Thousand In Permits First Day

Our City comment & discussion by THOMAS D. WATSON

Street Paving Should Be Held Up Till Sewer Lines Are In

AT last evening's session of the Glendale city council two property owners appeared to protest the widening and paving of a portion of San Fernando road.

In presenting their plea they told the council that while they were in favor of the widening and paving of the street they thought it for the best interest of the property owners that action be delayed until the sewer lines were laid.

* * *

WHILE we are not well enough acquainted with this particular stretch of street to comment on the protest we appreciate that a point was brought up which will be of interest to all taxpayers of Glendale. That is the paving of streets now on which eventually the sewer mains will be laid.

Of course we recognize that all paving should not be discontinued but we think it would be folly and a waste of money to pave streets now which will have to be torn up before many months to take care of the main lines of the sewer.

* * *

EVERY nickel which is saved the taxpayers now will assist in the favorable voting of the sewer bonds and in addition this saving will relieve some of the burden of the sewer cost.

We are quite sure our city councilmen will bear this in mind and hold up temporarily the paving of any street which in the event of the building of a sewer would have to be torn up again.

THE building permits for October started off as another record breaker with a total of $90,200, bringing the total for the year to $7,410,171, or $1,104,200 more than all of 1922.

We anticipate the month of October will be a record breaker in many ways. There never was a time since the war when so much optimism was in the air as right now. The real estate men are fairly bubbling over with enthusiasm.

* * *

THAT this feeling is justified is borne out by both real estate transfers and the amount of building permits issued.

Undoubtedly the demand for houses is keeping ahead of the supply. If this were not true it would be only a short time until building would slacken up.

* * *

THE fact that a large percentage of the permits issued are for one family houses demonstrates without argument that a steady day-by-day growth of our city continues. Permits of large amounts for business blocks are gratifying but nothing can further the growth of Glendale like homes for the home seeker.

NORFLEET, JOE FURNEY'S NEMESIS LANDS SIXTH MAN

DALLAS, Tex., Oct. 2.—A four-year chase by J. Frank Norfleet, a Hale county, Texas, rancher, of six men who fleeced him out of $45,000, ended today with the arrest of the sixth alleged member of the gang of "bunco" artists in Salt Lake City. Norfleet, in a message to Dallas police from Salt Lake, advised local authorities that he had the sixth member of the band.

The first member of the gang to be run down by Norfleet was Joe Furey who, with his wife and son lived for a year or two at 410 Piedmont Park, Glendale. Furey's escape, by bribing two Los Angeles officers who are now serving penitentiary sentences for the crime, his subsequent recapture through the efforts of Norfleet and his death later while serving a long prison sentence are now matters of history.

MRS. WHITE IS GIVEN IMPORTANT POST WITH P.-T. A.

Mrs. John Robert White of this city has been advised of her appointment to the chairmanship of the child labor department of the California Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher associations. Aside from the work she may be able to do in the effort to improve conditions with regard to child labor, she feels it will be a liberal education through the survey she will get of industries in which children are employed and of the laws enacted for their protection.

OCTOBER GOES LIMIT IN FIRST . . . DAY PERMITS

Record Is 28 for Total of $90,200, Nearly All for Homes

October came bouncing and roaring in yesterday with twenty-eight building permits having a valuation of $90,200, and not one of them was for more than $6500. The boys of the building department were kept on their toes every minute.

"Things sure are humming," said Building Superintendent Van Dewater.

"Yea Bo," echoed Fred the versatile permit slinger.

These permits were all for homes or garages, which shows there is absolutely no let up when it comes to preparing for the hordes of homeseekers that are sure to come rambling in this fall and winter. These permits show conclusively that some builders have faith in Glendale, believing that the coming winter will see the greatest amount of activity the valley has ever known.

The knockout of the day was the work of Jan Groen, one of Glendale's leading home builders, who lives at 602 West Fairmont, yesterday, who took up eleven permits for hign class homes.

COUNCIL HANDED BOUQUET BY THE REALTY BOARD

The Glendale city council was handed a "bouquet" by the governing committee of the Glendale Realty board last night for the work the council has done in connection with securing sewers for this city.

The floral communication read as follows:

"The governing committee of the Glendale Realty Board heartily expresses its congratulations and expresses its sincere appreciation to the Honorable Council of the City of Glendale for its untiring efforts in securing a sewer connection with the city of Los Angeles, and pledges its loyal support to the further efforts necessary to bring the sewer project to a successful culmination."

The communication was filed.

This communication was signed by C. D. Thom, president; E. P. Hayward, secretary; Charles B. Guthrie, A. M. Yale, Arthur Campbell, Roy King, J. W. Pearson and Peter Hanson.

FORMAL REPORT OF RELIEF FUND TOTAL TO BE FILED

At the meeting of the Glendale Chapter, American Red Cross, to be held Wednesday at 3:30 at the Chamber of Commerce, the chairman, Mrs. H. E. Bartlett will make the formal report on the fund collected and transmitted for Papanese relief, which report will be filed with the records of the organiation as an evidence of its work.

Members will also consider the budget required to cover the needs of the coming year and the manner in which the chapter can best co-operate with the Community Chest organization which it has endorsed.

'PETTICOAT LANE' FIRST SHOWING GREAT SUCCESS

Fairly Sparkles With Pretty Girls and Charlie Boys

"Petticoat Lane" fairly sparkles with pretty girls and Charlie boys of the footlights and is wonderful for the opportunities it gives the young people of Glendale to show what they can do before the footlights. Many a celebrity in the musical and theatrical world has been discovered in embrio in just such a cast. Never have so many of the young people who have been trained in our high school or in the dramatic and dancing schools of the city been seen together and "Petticoat Lane" is well worth while for its ensemble if it had no other merits.

It is also a revelation in up-to-the-minute costumes, a fashion revue under the most charming auspices with a musical comedy thrown in, First came the ginghams and lawns, the tennis costumes, the bathing togs and then the evening gowns in the scenes staged in the Egyptian cafe. All of them were lovely and were almost the making of the show. They were loaned for the occasion by Mr. and Mrs. Earl Pendroy of the Pendroy Dry Goods company from their most exclusive stock, with astonishing generosity. So wonderful are they in line and color, and so rich in the embroideries with which the majority are embellished that they baffle complete description. To be enjoyed they must be seen and those who failed to attend the first show should not be absent from its repetition tonight to see how the beauty of maids and matrons can be brought out by such artistic gowning. Matrons who were glad to help the De Molay boys by taking the passive parts of attendants on the "Egyptian Cafe" as pictured on this stage in gowns that would attract admiration at the Biltmore, included Mesdames W. E. Evans, Warren Roberts, Malvina Barker, C. L. Marlenee, W. T. Burton, Arthur Dibbern, Mrs. George Smith, Mrs. Max Green, Mrs. Lloyd Wilson, Miss Helene Morgan, Mrs. Louis Stelzer, Mrs. Albert Pearce, Mrs. A. L. Baird, Miss Evelyn Sample, Miss Emma Laura Cooper, Miss Lucille Allen, Miss Marie Hearnshaw, and others who attractively displayed the beauty of the creations they wore.

While it is a benefit for the De Molay chapter which all Glendale is ready to foster, the show has no apologies to make on its own behalf and should attract a large audience tonight.

Dancers of Glendale who are semi-professionals have been generous in giving their talents to help the show and it is proving a fine vehicle for the display of the work of advanced students of the Keller School and of Miss Edith Lindsay.

BIKE RIDER HURT BY AUTO

Colin Harris, 344 Burchett steret, was injured at 3:30 o'clock Monday afternoon when the bicycle he was riding ran into a machine driven by Stella E. Lindwood, 1119 East Broadway, the accident occurring at the corner of Arden and Central. After being given "first aid" the boy was taken to his home.

GLENDALE DAILY PRESS CONTINUES TO BE LEGAL NEWSPAPER OF THE CITY

Is Lowest Bidder for City Printing This Year, as Last, and So Will Continue to Set Forth Measures Passed by Council

BID 3 CENTS AN INCH LOWER COMPETITOR'S

This Third Triumph of Daily Press in Securing City Printing Contract Means Further Saving of Thousands of Dollars to Taxpayers

The Glendale Daily Press will continue to be the legal newspaper of Glendale for another year. Bids for legal printing for the ensuing year were received and opened by the Glendale council last night. The result was as follows:

Glendale Daily Press, 40 cents.
Glendale Evening News, 43 cents.

When bids for the legal printing were opened and read by City Clerk Van Wie they were referred to the city manager for checking and report at the same meeting. At 9:30 o'clock, when City Manager Reeves was ready to report on the matter, Councilman Sam Davis moved that the awarding of the contract be laid over until Thursday night. Several of the councilmen stated they saw no reason why the matter should be laid over. The Press was the lowest bidder and the contract might as well be awarded one time as another. However, in order to maintain harmony, the council voted unanimously to delay the awarding of the contract until Thursday night.

During the two years that the Press has printed the legal matter of the city it has saved the local taxpayers thousands of dollars over the price that would have been paid had the next highest bidder been awarded the contract for printing the city's legal documents.

Three years ago the Glendale Press management felt that the city was paying too much for its legal printing. The rates that had been charged up to that time carried with them too large a percentage of profit. For this reason, principally, this paper entered the fight, and, as it will be remembered, the bid of the Press was far below the next lowest offered.

Every dollar that the city saves on printing means a dollar less to be paid by the property owners of the city—it means just so much less revenue that the taxes of the city will have to produce. The very act of the Glendale Press entering the field two years ago and "copping off" the contract for the legal work automatically put thousands of dollars in the pockets of the property owners of this city. The residents of the city realize, at least in a measure, what this means.

A year ago the Glendale Press again took the "bit between its teeth" and ran away with everything that looked like a legal printing contract—once more putting several thousands of dollars in the pockets of local property owners.

When the bids were opened and read by City Clerk Van Wie last night they showed that the Glendale Press is still on the job when it comes to saving money to the taxpayers of this city—when it comes to putting dollars into the pockets of every owner of a lot, house, business block, piece of acreage and even into the pockets of the renters of the city.

The printing of the legals of the city will be carried on during the coming year with the promptness and efficiency that has characterized this work during the past two years and the Glendale Press will constantly keep its ears open for the best interests of the city as a whole, along this as well as all other lines.

REHEARSALS OF 'DREAMLAND' ARE INTRIGUING MANY

Fine Progress Being Made by the Cast and Director

The sound of spontaneous laughter, bursts of song and indications of movement that escaped from the closely curtained windows of the store building at the southeast corner of California and Brand has been tempting many a passerby during the evenings of the past week to try to peer in through slits and cracks in the otherwise opaque screen to find out what was going on inside and what they might be missing. If they were fortunate in their peep-hole and remained long enough they discovered it was a rehearsal of the community pageant, "A Night in Dreamland," which is to be presented October 10-11 at the Tuesday Afternoon clubhouse by talented Glendalians under the auspices of St. Mark's Guild.

It is necessarily rehearsed in sections, as the full cast is expected to number 400. Some of the watchers succeeded in getting in as the "intelligent and appreciative audience" and their reports of what went on have whetted the curiosity of others. It may be lure enough to get them into the cast, for Director Wellington, who is conducting the rehearsals, says there is still room even for the ambitious amateur who has never had any acquaintance with grease paint and the footlights of a real stage. He promises that it will prove one of the biggest and most gorgeous spectacles ever seen in Glendale, a credit to St. Mark's, to the performers and the city.

NOTED SPEAKERS AT CHRISTIAN CHURCH TONIGHT

Following the church night supper and devotional service at Central Christian church Wednesday evening, a missionary meeting will be held at which Dr. George Mosher and wife just returned from the Congo district in Africa, and Mrs. Royal J. Dye, who, with her husband, Dr. Dye, started the work there 24 years ago, will be the speakers.

Dr. Mosher is a former Glendale resident, having lived for many years at what is now 111 North Central avenue. Everyone is invited to attend this meeting.

H. M. LENNOX HOME ROBBED

The home of H. M. Lennox, 1299 North Pacific avenue, was entered and robbed at about 7:30 o'clock last night, according to police records. Local officials are investigating this case.

TUESDAY CLUB IN FIRST ASSEMBLY OF YEAR TODAY

National, State, County Leaders to Be Honored at Reception

Today may be considered the real dedication of the Tuesday Afternoon club to the work it has undertaken to perform for the community.

It is holding its first assembly of the year beginning with a reception and luncheon at which leaders in the national, state and county federations will be hoonred by the president, Mrs. Daniel Campbell, and the members and officers associated with her, as an evidence that this big and prospering Glendale organization is a part of the great current of activity in which women all over the United States are participating for the betterment of their country and their communities.

For this reason Mrs. Campbell is dispensing with a president's message, and confining herself to gracious words of greeting and the giving of information which members desire in regard to the new sections, the enlargement of departments, and some facts about the budget and the bright financial outlook of the club. She wisely argues that the past year as president has revealed to all her policies and ambitions for the club, and she and her fellow members need the time for the larger outlook which these special guests can give.

The chief speaker at the luncheon is Mrs. John C. Urquhart, president of the State Federation who brings the message of her organization. Another distinguished visitor is Mrs. O. W. March of Chico, first vice-president of the state organization, who is spending the fall and winter in Los Angeles.

While Mrs. Thos. G. Winters, national president, is not present in the flesh, she is here in spirit and has transmitted her message to Mrs. Campbell to be read to her co-workers. In it she expresses the hope that the coming year "will strengthen, deepen and sweeten our common club life. You can make a real contribution, each in your own way toward a better America in citizenship, in education, in child welfare, in higher standards of home life, in legislation, in the outflowing spirit that expresses the soul of the nation in art. You are helping your country to achieve leadership in the world and this achievement is not individual; it is gained only by being a great team. We are together for the sake of all."

As it will not be possible for Mrs. Charles Toll, president of the district federation to be with her townswomen on this occasion because of a previous engagement, the greetings she might have given for her organization are being presented by Mrs. John W. Shenk, district chairman of "American Citizenship," whose theme will be one close to her heart: "Our Duty as American Citizens."

The luncheon will be followed by the splendid program which has been arranged by Mrs. James Henry Ballagh, founder of the Matinee Musical club who is to be curator of the Creative Section of the Glendale organization the coming year. It will feature Los Angeles artists of distinction but our own Julia Pelley will also be presented in artistic dances.

ELKS PLANNING FOR ANNIVERSARY MEETING ON 15TH

The regular meeting of the Glendale lodge of Elks held Monday night with James Apffel, exalted ruler, in charge, was devoted largely to completing plans for the celebration of the anniversary of the local lodge on October 15 and also for the annual picnic on October 14.

On October 15 the eleventh anniversary of the Glendale lodge of Elks will be celebrated. After a short business session there will be a reception given for the old Fillmore members, followed by an entertainment and speaking.

The annual picnic on October 14 will be held at Happiland park, formerly Glendale-Verdugo park on Verdugo road.

The jazz orchestra of No. 1289 was out last night and made a big "hit" with the members by playing six selections. This new musical organization of the club is making splendid progress under the management of Bill Bode, who is working hard to make it one of the big features of the winter meetings.

HELP! HELP! TAKE OUT THAT WANT AD INSTANTER

The telephone rang—and rang some more.

You know how telephones will ring when there's an excited person on the other end of the wire.

"For goodness sakes," said the excited lady, "take that 'for rent' ad of mine out of The Press. If you don't I'll throw the phone in the street or contract nervous prostration. I'm pestered to death with applicants for my house. I've only one house, you know, and that was rented soon after my ad appeared."

The telephone buzzed a whole lot of other things that the office boy at the receiving end failed to catch. There was something about never experiencing such returns from advertising and not knowing a single little classified liner could bring such remarkable results and things like that.

All of which goes to show that it isn't the size of the ad but where you place it.

LIGHTING SYSTEM OVER PAYMENTS ARE RETURNED

The money overpaid through assessment for the installation of the ornamental lighting system on San Fernando road, Monday night authorized by the city council, amounting to $2,817.48, was returned on demand to the owners of property by whom it was paid.

When the assessments were levied for this work it was not definitely known how much it would cost, and the estimates were made so that there might not be a deficiency. It is this excess cost that is being returned to property owners.

The following resolution was adopted in connection with this matter:

"Resolved that the surplus between the cost of the installation of the ornamental lighting system on a portion of San Fernando road under Resolution of Intention No. 1523 and the sum realized from the assessment thereof, to-wit, the sum of $2,817.48, be refunded pro rata to the parties by whom it was paid, upon demand thereof by the persons entitled thereto, made upon the city controller and upon execution of a receipt thereof."

BOY SCOUTS DELEGATES BACK FROM MEETING

Big Five Have Great Time at the Santa Barbara Conference

Returning to Glendale early Sunday evening, the five delegates who represented the Verdugo Hills Boy Scout conference at the Older Scouts' conference at Santa Barbara, September 28, 29 and 30, were all enthusiasm for the affair and declared it the best ever.

Senior Patrol Leader Arthur Barton of Glendale Troop No. 2, remarked that he never realized before the extent to which older boys are participating in Boy Scout activities. A survey showed that of the 217 registered delegates and leaders who attended the conference, four were college students, thirty-six were seniors in high school and all but three of the remainder were going to high school. "The friendship of the camp was one of the most striking things about the whole conference," said Scout Barton.

"I got the impression that the cream of Scouting was there," declared Kenneth Solomon, another delegate from Troop No. 2.

Glenn Cunningham of Troop No. 3, Glendale, claims that he came back to Glendale a great deal better prepared to help put Scouting over in his troop. Star Scout Robert Eastman of Troop No. 2 said that the conference put the Scout laws in an entirely new light.

Francis Henry of 224 Arden avenue, who accompanied the delegates as their friend and councilor, came in for considerable praise by the boys. He was with them at every session of the conference and the Scouts think he is O. K. Mr. Henry said that he enjoyed the conference very much and that he could not have had a better set of delegates to accompany.

At a meeting of the delegates Monday evening at the district Scout office plans were formulated for visiting the various civic organizations and troops in the district. Each delegate will talk two minutes and the subjects are as follows: "The Older Fellow's Opportunity in His Home," Glenn Cunningham, Glendale Troop No. 3; "The Older Fellow's Opportunity in His School," Kenneth Solomon of Glendale Troop No. 2; "The Older Fellow's Opportunity in His Community," Charles Bosserman, Troop No. 3, Glendale; "The Older Fellow's Opportunity in His Church," Robert Eastman, Glendale Troop No. 2. "High Lights of the Conference," is the subject assigned to Arthur Barton of Troop No. 2, Glendale.

It is thought that the delegates will talk at the luncheon meetings of the Rotary club, Thursday, October 4; the Kiwanis club, Friday, October 5, and the Exchange club, Wednesday, October 10. They will visit troops in the following order: Wednesday evening, October 3, Troop No. 4, Glendale; Friday evening, October 5, Troops 1, 2 and 3, Glendale; Thursday evening, October 11, Troops 1, 2 and 3, Burbank; Friday evening, October 12, La Crescenta Troop No. 1 and Tujunga Troop No. 1.

TWO DEBATING LEAGUES TOO MUCH AT HIGH?

Students of oratory in Glendale High and their coaches have decided that membership in two debating leagues is a good deal like a two-ring circus, rather distracting and difficult to compass. The school is therefore resigning from the Central league but retaining its membership in the Southern California league. Each class will elect a committee to choose debaters. There will be inter-class contests to determine the personnel of the teams. The winning teams will debate with each other and will receive the silver cup representing class championship. The senior class is rich in talent, numbering Paul Cunningham, Isabel Tousey, Horace Anderson, Charles Worley and Arden Gingery. In the junior class are Mary Jo Phillips, Bonnie Jean Lockwood, Jack Finch, Donald McMillan, Joyce Farr, Ramona Bronson, Wendel Beauchamp and Velma Bolton.

COUNCIL SELLS TEN THOUSAND IN STREET BONDS

Hears Protests, Grants Permits, Hears Petitions, Etc.

Ten thousand dollars' worth of street bonds of the city of Glendale were purchased at the meeting of the city council Thursday by A. R. Eastman for the Glendale State bank, the price paid being $40 over the face value of the bonds, or $10,040. When it came time for bids for the bonds to be opened City Clerk Van Wie announced that no bids had been received, whereupon Mr. Eastman presented his check.

PROTESTS

There were no protests against the improvement of Alameda avenue and the next step in this work was ordered taken.

There were no protests against the improving of Stanley avenue and the next step in this work was ordered taken.

A 38 per cent protest against the opening and widening of Graynold street was received and the time of hearing these protests was set for two weeks from last night.

Mrs. Bacon and Mrs. M. B. Moberly, residents of San Fernando road, were present and protested against the widening of San Fernando road at this time, saying they, the property owners along that street, are ready and willing to have this street widened, but they want the work delayed until the sewer pipes have been laid. The members of the council concurred in this idea and the matter was held over for 30 days to see what will be done in the sewer matter. The protestants stated that they are heading a movement to have San Fernando widened for the entire length of the city and that this will probably result if the matter is delayed for a short time.

A company of residents living on East Acacia avenue presented a protest to the council against the meetings of the Nazarene church that are being held in the house at 417 East Acacia. The city attorney stated that there is nothing the city can do to stop the noise, which the protestants declare is a nuisance. However, the protestants were assured that the police department would co-operate in any way possible.

REST HOMES

Mrs. Roy Leffler, 601 South Adams street, was granted a permit to care for one child.

Mrs. Myrtle F. Billings was granted a permit to care for two children at her home on Raleigh street.

Mrs. Emma E. Thompson was granted a permit to care for three children at 216 North Cedar street.

PETITIONS

A petition bearing the names of 53 per cent of the property owners on Kenilworth avenue from Vine to Riverdale was received asking that that street be improved, and the city engineer was instructed to draft the necessary proceedings for this work.

CAMP GROUND

An application for a permit to operate a camp ground was received from Henry W. Detwiler of 146 South San Fernando road. Mr. Detwiler gave as references: A. W. Reynolds, Orange street; Rev. E. E. GREAT NARCOTIC FILM, "HUMAN WRECKAGE" AGAIN

So much comment has been made on the showing of "Human Wreckage," Mrs. Wallace Reid's play depicting the horrors of the narcotic traffic that the management of the Gateway Theater has yielded to the clamor for it to be shown there. Thursday and Friday are the big days.

Mrs. Reid, while filming "Human Wreckage," under supervision of the Anti-Narcotic League in California, received telegrams from prison wardens in all parts of the country commending her undertaking to assist the government in its fight to suppress the drug evil. Laudatory telegrams were received from L. E. Laws, warden of Sing Sing prison, Ossining, N. Y.; John Whitman, warden of the state penitentiary, Joliet, Ill., and Robert McKinley, warden of the state penitentiary, Philadelphia, Pa.

IMPOSSIBLE TO GET MEN FOR ROAD WORK

THE DALLES, Oregon, Oct. 2. (United Press)—Despite the fact that the highest wages of the season are offered men to complete the road building program of this section are not available, according to Roadmaster P. W. Marx. The shortage of laborers will seriously delay the plans for highway construction and repair, he said. Men are flocking to the harvest fields and orchards, Marx stated, and there are not enough left over to fill the road working jobs, despite the fact that $4.50 daily for ordinary labor is paid.

THE ISOLATION POLICY

A printed item not marked by authenticity, but nevertheless interesting, says:

"Pasadena, perhaps the strongest community in California in support of the League of Nations and American participation in European affairs two years ago, is swinging towards the isolation policy."

There is no reason to suppose that the sentiment of Pasadena differs in any essential manner from that of the close-knit section of which it is a part. The "isolation policy" is a term not used ordinarily by the opponents of the League of Nations. On the contrary they have been wont to resent the characterization, although fairly descriptive.

While the League of Nations was an issue, it had much support in California. It was fought by Senator Johnson, who in doing so defied requests, amounting to demands, from almost all the civic organizations of the state. He was told that his attitude was not in harmony with the desires of his constituents; and this undeniably was the truth. But it happens that the issue is past, for the present, and for a long time to come, beyond recall. There is no special utility in discussion of it.

The former proponents of the plan believe still that had the United States, where the idea had its origin, and first took definite form, kept faith, instead of repudiating its own doctrine, the result would have been beneficient, and the deplorable conditions that prevail in Europe now, never would have eventuated. But the conditions having arrived, the policy of interfering, even of suggesting, has been rendered wholly untenable. That the League of Nations is not being advocated does not mean that those who formerly advocated it believe that they were wrong in having done so. There seemed to be an opportunity to do much in promotion of world peace. That opportunity was rejected, spurned and has vanished.

AGE FOR GOLF

A venerable golf player fell dead on the links in England recently. Then appeared the statement that he had been the twelfth victim of the game to expire under similar conditions. From these figures somebody has adduced the conclusion that golf is too strenuous an exercise for the individual of fifty years. Were this belief to be established it would work great changes. People who are now looking forward with the hope that having reached fifty they will have time to indulge in golf, will be obliged to seek diversion elsewhere. The links of the present would be in great measure depopulated, the players fleeing in alarm in the direction of roque, or the place where horseshoes are pitched at a peg.

It may be worth while to remember that the incident of sudden death is not confined to followers of golf. On the contrary these are likely to be a hearty lot, enjoying the sport, blessed with good appetite, and a high degree of spirit. If it is true, as has been alleged in this connection, that a man of fifty is not physically fit to swing a golf club, or subject himself to the strain of coaxing a ball out of the rough, he is to be pitied. The chances are that he is too delicate for exercise of any sort, and that the proper course for him would be to swath himself in cotton, sit in the sun, and await the end.

As a matter of fact the man of fifty is likely to be benefited by golf. It gives him the open air, and is just strenuous enough to quicken his circulation in a healthful fashion. When the joints stiffen under the burden of years, and the arteries harden, it is time for moderation in all bodily activities. And golf, properly played, is moderation.

LOVE FOR CHILDREN

A pastor and his wife found a wee baby in a shelter provided for waifs, took it into their own home and hearts, and learned to love it as though its real parents. The child had been brought to the institution by a young woman who made scant explanations, but did say that the little one was not her's. That was twelve months ago.

Meanwhile the baby had so grown into the affections of its foster father and mother that they desire to adopt it. Now comes the young woman who had abandoned it to strangers, denying then its matehnity, to say that it is her's and that she wants to take it from the pastor and wife. The pair intend to resist the demand. It is to be hoped that they succeed.

When a mother deliberately abandons her own flesh and blood, and the waif is received gladly by kindly and considerate folk, regard for the welfare of the baby, ought to stamp the voluntary forfeiture of title as final, and the new status as permanent. A mother worthy of being guardian, does not abandon even the nameless child borne by her. She strives to care for it, or if circumstances force her to relinquish the charge, she indicates the desire to have this arrangement made only temporary.

PROPHETS OF EVIL

The time of prosperity always is seized by the prophet of evil. When conditions are good he pines dolorously that they are too good to last. Thus when a speaker at Portland predicts that there will be a slump in building, the statement does not come as a surprise. It was precisely the thing to be expected. One is under not the slightest obligation to believe it. On the contrary there is every reason for regarding the present rate of construction in this part of the country as destined to continue for a long time. It might subside, indeed inevitably will, after the pressure of demand had been in part met, and still be in sound condition. The tide towards California has set in, and shows no sign of diminishing. The people that it brings must have shelter. The capital they have with them, invested in various enterprises, increases the demand for housing for business purposes.

The wealth of this country taken into consideration, the prediction of hard times ought to be absurd always. When such times arrive their coming is due to maladjustment. Resources including every basic material are incalculable. There is an abundance of capital for their development. The normal condition is that of prosperity, and variations from it must be due to the fallibility of the human equation. Recognition of a high degree of prosperity should occasion cheerfulness rather than be used as the pretext for the lament that it is too good to last.

LOP-SIDED LAW

The spectacle of an American woman, native-born, a resident for years of California, but now without a country, is offered for consideration.

The woman in question married a Canadian in Canada, but the pair came to California to live. In accordance with the statute made and provided, the act of marriage endowed her with the citizenship of the husband. They both supposed that having become residents of the United States, the rule, if good, would work both ways. So the husband sought to become naturalized, believing that the process would naturalize the wife. She was only technically in need of naturalization anyhow. But the rule did not work both ways. The woman finds that she must be naturalized with every formality.

It is a little hard to understand why, if a woman becomes an alien by marrying, she does not become a citizen when her alien husband takes the oath of fealty. The point appears more graphically when the woman is native born, abroad but briefly, and then returns to remain.

PEDESTRIANS' COMPENSATION

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

If a workman falls and is injured while working for a mere employer he is entitled to compensation for his injuries from that employer.

Estella Lawton Lindsey

So far so good.

But when a chauffeur in charge of a high voltage automobile smashes into a mere citizen and breaks a leg or two or musses up the citizen so that he is of no further use in a practical world nobody thinks of compensation.

With humility we admit in the beginning that pedestrians have no business to be; the trouble is that lots of us can't help it and it is exactly this class that most needs its component parts in a competitive world filled with irresponsible young idiots who get drunk with the sense of power that arrives as soon as they lay hands on a steering wheel.

Statistics show that 53 per cent of the automobile accidents are caused by commercial trucks; and anybody capable of realizing anything should understand that if employers were compelled to take out compensation insurance in favor of the victims of such trucks the fatalities would be materially reduced.

An employer will be careful of the dispositions and tendencies of his men if the insurance companies refuse him insurance because of his employes' carelessness, recklessness or defiant regard for human life. As it is firms employ any youth who desires to speed about the city to the music of flying wheels and the public pays the price in broken bones, hospital bills and funeral expenses.

This morning I passed a show window full of the pictures of wrecks caused by careless truck drivers. One young mad man had tried to drive his machine between two rapidly approaching street cars with the result that the remains of the truck looked like a section of Yokohama just after the fire and tidal wave.

Another had taken a corner at 60 miles an hour and a 24,000 pound capacity truck hit a child and crippled it for life. Nothing can be done with the driver or the firm that employed him and released him on a helpless citizenry.

What's the matter with our legislators that they do nothing to relieve us from such menaces? Surely such a driver is at least as dangerous as a quart of moonshine, and the chap who harbors a quart of synthetic gin on his person or in his car stands a good chance to go to jail.

For the love of whole bones let us have pedestrian compensation. As a race we are not given to suicide and none of us is likely to throw himself before an onrushing truck in order that the family may collect the insurance as has been done from time to time in Japan.

Who'll father the pedestrian insurance movement and take his place among public benefactors?

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

The boss fired Kinney Harrigan this morning. With considerable eclat. Kinney took the firing rather hard.

"It's unfair," said Kinney. "You'll find you're making a mistake."

"It's always the other fellow who makes the mistake, Kinney," said the boss. "That's why I'm firing you."

Kinney made a fine start with us. He had everything needed for success, it seemed—looks, the gift of gab, cleverness, energy—but by and by Kinney's popularity with the rest of the force was represented by a row of zeros. Kinney never admitted making a mistake. He always blamed some one else.

"I didn't forget," Kinney would say. "George forgot. I didn't do it. George did it. I didn't write the letter. George did."

George, in this instance, being a symbol for the other members of the force.

If an error of omission or commission was proved on him, he refused to dicuss the affair further. Many a time, when unfortunate things happened for which Kinney was responsible, he managed to slide out of blame. The boss liked him. Besides, the rest of the crowd is good-natured. Sometimes there was an honest doubt in "George's" mind.

"Maybe I did do it, Boss," he'd say. "Anyhow, charge it up to me, if Kinney says it wasn't his fault."

But in the end Kinney was fired. There was something childish in him—some weak place somewhere—for most of the little faults he threw upon the shoulders of others were of no consequence whatever. Kinney's trouble was that he was too much of an egotist. He could not bear to be blamed. His pride suffered, as does the pride of a small boy made to stand in the corner for stealing jam.

But there is no place in this world—no good place, at least—for the man who refuses to stand up and be counted. The man who continually evades responsibility for his mistakes is apt to lose the opportunity to make them. It is never good sportsmanship to lie out of trouble.

THE LISTENING POST

By James W. Foley

JAMES W. FOLEY

What's your notion of happiness?
That is rather an interesting question.
Provocative of discussion.
Because we all want to be happy.
And we have differing notions about it.

* * *

The desire for happiness is an essential thing in human beings.
And perhaps in animals.
And birds and flowers.
We do not know how far sensation goes.
A lizard likes to lie out on a stone in the sun.

* * *

There must be some reason he seeks the sun and the stone.
It is not a pure matter of instinct.
Being cold blooded he wants to be warm.
So he seeks comfort.
As does a reptile.
Or a turtle.
Yet who would be a lizard or a turtle.

* * *

But the schoolboy at times is a good deal of a lizard or a turtle.
For he likes to lie out in the sun and get warm.
Just be lazy, as Dunbar says.
And many of us have had that feeling.
The desire to lie out in the sun and be lazy.
Wherein we have the desire of the lizard or the reptile.

* * *

The scientist finds his happiness in seeking.
Wanting to know truths.
And setting out to discover them.
Sitting for hours perhaps watching and observing and noting.
It might not make me happy.
Or you.

But a discovery of truth is perhaps the greatest refinement of happiness.

And while the scientist seeks that, some one dances endlessly over a polished floor to the strains of a jazz orchestra.

* * *

He also finds what he thinks is happiness.
And so does the golfer on the green.
The chess player at his board.
The preacher in his study.
The artist at his easel.
The composer at his piano.

* * *

Nobody knows perhaps just what happiness is.
Because nobody has found and kept it for long.
It is rather an elusive thing.
You think you have it and then it slips away from you.

* * *

Children know it in a toy balloon.
And most of us are like the children.
Only our toy balloons differ one from another.
But we are all toy balloon seekers.
Only the toy balloon of one man is a planet and of another is a broiled lobster.

* * *

So it would be interesting to get a symposium of expression as to what is happiness.
Diogenes said it was having nothing.
Ancient monarchs believed it was in having everything.
Alexander wept because there were no more countries to conquer.

* * *

The man in pain says happiness would consist in being free from pain.
So it is altogether a relative thing.
A doughnut would be unimportant to Lucullus.
But a hungry schoolboy would find happiness with it.

Songs of the Poets

"Like a Lavelock in the Lift"—By Jean Ingelow

It's we two, it's we two, it's we two for aye,
All the world, and we two, and Heaven be our stay!
Like a lavelock in the lift, sing, O bonny bride!
All the world was Adam once, with Eve by his side.

What's the use, my lass, my love!—what can it do?
I am thine, and thou art mine; life is sweet and new.
If the world have missed the mark, let it stand by;
For we two have gotten leave, and once more we'll try.

Like a lavelock in the lift, sing, O bonny bride!
It's we two, it's we two, happy side by side.
Take a kiss from me, thy man; now the song begins:
"All is made afresh for us, and the brave heart wins."

When the darker days come, and no sun will shine,
Thou shalt dry my tears, lass, and I'll dry thine.
It's we two, it's we two, while the world's away,
Sitting by the golden sheaves on our wedding day.

A LIST OF COMMON LIES

By DR. FRANK CRANE

FIRST impressions are usually wrong. Appearances are commonly deceptive. Many of the things universally believed are not so at all.

Just as savages believe the earth is flat, that the sun goes around the earth and that thunder, rain and other natural phenomena are caused by spirits instead of natural laws, so the majority of men accept and act upon certain beliefs that are not true at all, simply because they do not like to think.

Lie 1. The selfish and useless are free. The truth is that the longer such people live the more tightly they are bound by disease of body and wretchedness of spirit. Only those who accept and discharge their responsibilities obtain inner freedom.

Lie 2. Those who have the most possessions are the happiest. The truth is that the surest road to happiness is to rid one's soul from the tyranny of things.

Lie 3. Those who are the most conspicuous are the happiest. The truth is that to a normal man notoriety is a nuisance.

Lie 4. The greatest are those who rule. The truth is that ruling is always second class business; greatness comes only through service.

Lie 5. If you want to succeed look out for Number One. The truth is that constantly looking out for Number One is the way to lose your friends, lose your power of enjoyment and lose your own soul.

Lie 6. To succeed in the world one must not be too honest. The truth is that the laws of business success are based upon honesty.

Lie 7. It is hard to be good and easy to be bad. The truth is that those people have the easiest time in the world who come the nearest to being honest, truthful and virtuous. The way of the transgressor is always hard.

Lie 8. Work is disagreeable, and the work of the world is done by the unfortunate persons who are not clever enough to live without working. The truth is that about all the happiness there is in the world is a by-product of work.

Lie 9. You are going to be good in the world after you have made your money. The truth is that about all the good you do, that amounts to anything, is the good you do in the making of your money. The welfare of the world is promoted in business, not after business.

Lie 10. Personal Liberty. There is no such thing, except on a desert island or in a state of savage nudity. No civilization is possible except by the sacrifice of personal liberties. No happiness is possible except through the limitation of personal liberties. No society, or law, or order is possible except upon the surrender of certain personal liberties.

TRAIL OF A KANSAS CAR

[Sabetha (Kans.) Herald]

I lost three bolts from my Ford car Tuesday morning. I walked back three blocks, found the missing bolts and also ran across one radius rod, three nuts, two extra bolts, some plate glass, part of a skid chain, timer, blow out patch, piece of fender, shell hair pin, broken tire wrench, scattered lunch refuse, old tire cover and pocketbook with a hole in it.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

HENRY JAMES

One of the good new rules of the road is that the automobilist shall keep to the right. Obeying this may in some instances be a slight hardship, but nothing justifying the ignoring of the law. Many roads have a crown in the center, and traveling along this is easier than to travel at one side.

It is an annoying habit of slow drivers to take the center and keep it. Often they will spurt when necessary to prevent the passage of a driver who desires to go faster. They block traffic in a stupid and wholly inexcusable fashion. If they don't behave now, the hope that the police shall get them and the court give them the limit, will be general.

Another requirement to be rigidly enforced is that signs be given before a turn is made in either direction or a machine is stopped. This signal must be visible first when the vehicle is fifty feet away from the proposed point of turning. Every driver has had the experience of seeing the automobile just ahead of him dart without warning, to left or right, or suddenly pull up, causing collision or a hasty application of the emergency brake.

When drivers will not act with discretion the necessity of forcing them to be discreet is plain.

Troops that were called out to fight fire at Berkeley, it seems are not to be paid. Somebody had blundered in the method of calling them.

Such railroad accidents as that which occurred in Wyoming recently are very rare. The safety of railroad travel is remarkable, considering the thousands of miles over which thousands of people are carried daily at high speed.

Recorded in the same column with this item, is another telling of a girl of fifteen who had visited her bigamous husband in jail. She had known he already had a wife when she married him, but said, "We fell in love and so, of course, we married."

So it would appear that the great institution of matrimony does not strike all observers in exactly the same manner.

Blackmail is a most despicable crime. To kill a blackmailer, by reasonably humane methods, would not be likely to be construed as an offense by any jury. At the same time it is impossible to get widly excited over an alleged blackmailing plot of which a feminine film star is the supposed victim. There will arise, however unjustly, a suspicion that the publicity acquired by a brace of divorces granted to or from her, having subsided, the need has been felt for a fresh and spectacular gesture.

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

THE CAUSE

Pattie—patient Pattie, the family called her—was having trouble with a little spot in her garden. Nothing would grow on it and the bare brown spot worried the conscientious little gardener so that she constantly planted it over in the hope that this time something would come of it.

Nothing did come of it. The seeds sprouted, grew so far, turned a sad yellow-brown and passed out. Pattie sighed, scratched the ground and watered it and seeded it once more. The seeds performed once more and again Pattie sighed and began over again.

Brother, attracted at last by her patient efforts and barren results left his own patch and stood looking down at the bare spot.

"I can't get a thing to grow there," sighed Pattie.

"So I see! What's the matter with the spot?"

"I don't know. It just doesn't grow anything and I plant it and plant it."

"Did you go down under to see what was the matter with it?"

"Why, no! It's just dirt. What should be the matter with it?"

"Such a nut," said Brother rudely. "Give me your spade." He dug down manfully and the spade struck stone the first thrust.

"That's what's the matter. You got a big stone there and you expected something to grow on it. You got to get the stone out. It's a wonder you wouldn't look what you're doing."

The school world is full of patient Pattie's, on both sides of the teacher's desk. The teacher keeps trying to build a structure without knowing what is under it to hold it up and when it topples day after day she patiently gathers the material together and starts once more.

A look underneath would make the situation clear and render her work secure, but she patiently toils on without ever looking for the stone in the way.

Children make the same mistakes time after time and start again in the same old way each time. They have never glimpsed the underlying principle of work or conduct that is in the way. Until they find it and work according to it they will make no headway for principles are great stones that block our way when we work against them instead of with them.

There are great principles of human growth, and, unless the teacher is aware of them, unless he unerringly puts his finger on them and points the child their way, he and the pupil are going to mark time endlessly.

Find the cause and the effect will follow principle. If you don't you do what the Irish proverb says, "Travel on the ship Neverbudge whose captain is Delay."

GLENDALE HIGH ENROLLMENT HAS REACHED 1749

Two String Trios Made Up; Class Representatives in Cabinet Elected

Nine more entrants were enrolled at Glendale high this morning, bringing the enrollment to 1749. More and more does it seem probable that 1800 will be received into the school before it moves to its new home at Broadway and Verdugo road.

Monday was assembly day at Glendale high. From two assemblies the gatherings have expanded to four, or one for each class. The big proposition Monday was the campaign for the sale of student body tickets which admit to all regular school activities such as games, debates, etc., and which also entitle the holders to a copy of the school paper, "The Explosion."

This year ambitious plans are to be carried out and the school is so much larger that an increased budget has been adopted which has made necessary a price of $2 for the student body tickets. This is an increase of 50 cents over last year, but at that is 50 cents below the student body tickets of any other high school in this locality in the same class.

The matter was eloquently presented by class presidents, officers of the cabinet, Coach Hayhurst and others. There is a lot of class spirit in the school which manifests itself in competitive effort to roll up the largest list of sales. The class which first gets 100 percent of its membership takes high rank.

The two string trios made up of violin, cello and piano, which have been organized by Mrs. Dora Gibson, head of the music department, are to make a specialty of chamber of music. In one of them Lilian Sutton plays the violin, Marjorie Potts the cello, and Leonora Rose the piano. In the second trio, Bertha Brown is violinist, Elizabeth Crossman cellist and Lucile Harris, pianist.

All the class representatives in the cabinet have now been elected, the personnel being: Seniors, Dante La Frenchi; juniors, Rirchard Ryan; sophomores, Ellsworth De Parca; freshmen, Marjorie Neilson.

PEARL KELLER SCHOOL OPENS ITS FALL TERM

The Pearl Keller School, 140-A North Brand, announces the opening fall term for classes in ballroom dancing under the direction of Mary Grace Egley, formerly of the Rutherford school of Los Angeles. Previous to that time she was associated with other prominent schools, having taught at the Cotillion Dancing academy of Portland, Oregon, for a number of years, the largest and finest academy in that city.

Mrs. Egley is also a member of the American National association of Masters of Dancing which held its fortieth annual convention in Los Angeles this summer. This association is the largest of its kind in the United States and has representatives in several foreign countries, thereby keeping its members in touch with the latest and best in dancing.

The old-time dances are coming back into favor and the slow, beautiful waltz has once more taken its proper place. The trend is for more speed in the fox trot, thereby eliminating the slow, draggy, objectionable steps.

All the newest and latest dances will be taught.

"CONVERSION" THE SERMON THEME OF REV. C. A. COLE

Rev. C. A. Cole's subject for the Sunday morning service at Central Christian church, was "Conversion in Childhood, Youth and Adulthood." Taking the three instances of Christ raising persons from the dead, the speaker drew lessons on conversion. The first miracle of the kind, the raising of Jairus' daughter, a little maid of 12 years, was a very simple ceremony, two spoken words, but these words were startingly effective for the maid who had just died arose at once, perfectly well and ministered to them. The deduction from this by the pastor was that the conversion of children came about easily because they are at the receptive age.

The next instance, that of the son of the widow of Nain, required more concentrated effort and a more powerful appeal to the slumbering spirit by the Master, as does the conversion of young folk approaching maturity.

In the third insance, the raising of Lazarus, who had been four days in the tomb, a time of preparation was necessary and the Master stayed away two days or more after he was informed of His friend's death. Just as a man steeped in sin from a long life of indulgence requires a careful approach and a studied appeal, so the raising of Lazarus whose body had already begun to corrupt, required a greater effort on the part of the Master.

"We say the heart of the child is more easily touched than that of the adult," said the speaker, "but this is not so. There is no age to the heart and it is as easily touched in the hardened sinner as in the tender child. The trouble is to get through the accumulation of doubt and sin that surrounds the heart. There is no soul beyond the power of Christ to save. They must be won as we find them."

The evening sermon subject was "Why Do Men Go to Bed Hungry?" and the pastor answered the question briefly by saying, "Because he knows not God and His Christ and because he will not pay the price," then elaborated this answer into a powerful appeal for the acceptance of this religion of Jesus Christ, which if practiced with one's whole heart and life will solve every problem of humanity.

GETS A LETTER FROM DAUGHTER IN NIPPON LAND

Mrs. Gorham Writes Her Mother Details of the Japan Quake

Mrs. Adam Hoch of 463 West Lexington drive, Glendale, received a leter on Monday, October 1, from her daughter, Mrs. Gorham, who with her husband has been residing at Kokura, Japan, for the past year, having moved there from Yokohama, where they resided for four years. In this letter are many interesting incidents and accounts of many unusual things brought to light in the recent earthquake.

Mrs. Gorham states in her letter that Mr. and Mrs. A. L. J. DeWitte and Mrs. A. A. Mallory of Yokohama, who have many friends in Los Angeles and vicinity and were at first reported as among those missing or dead, are safe. She says "both DeWittes are safe. They are at Miyoshita and were in the quake, but not hurt. They had to walk 23 miles to the railroad and then to Kobe.

"Mrs. Mallory was in Captain Stevens' automobile in the downtown district of Yokohama at the time of the quake and was struck in the head by the stone from the buildings. Her injuries amounted only to blackened eyes. She and Capt. Stevens and another friend were on the water for five hours watching Yokohama burn. They were then taken aboard a boat to Kobe."

Mr. and Mrs. Gorham when living at Yokohama resided at 31 Bluff and in her letter Mrs. Gorham states that the house at that place collapsed. The DeWittes' house collapsed and burned at once.

"The quake was like an explosion, no small shake first, just this terrific upheaval, then a number of good hard shakes, but the first was awful. Tokio thought Yokohama was all right and Yokohama thought Tokio safe. The foreigners have been brought to Kobe from Yokohama and even the Japanese people are being taken out of the city of the dead, no food, no water.

"People at Kamakura and beach resorts all safe but cannot get away just yet as there are no trains. There were no big waves as at first reported. Tokio foreigners are all safe, fire in the downtown district, that is all. Most foreign firms will move to Kobe, though some were not touched in Tokio.

"Taking into consideration the damage to property in Yokohama, the loss of life among the foreigners was not large, among the Japanese it was dreadful."

The letter received by Mrs. Hoch was written by Mrs. Gorham at Osaka, where she and Mrs. Mallory, who will make her home with her, were spending the night after having visited Kobe to see what they could do to help.

Mrs. Gorham says "looting in the earthquake stricken area began about the third day. All jails collapsed and the prisoners scattered. The Japanese gunboats stayed out and watched, did not even pick up the Japanese people. But the Japanese people themselves were fine. Riksha men helped the foreigners, no outcry at all. Those unhurt helped those who had been hurt. Most people lost their clothes at the first and coolie men shared what they had. One Japanese man lost all his family and had his own arm broken, but carried a box of mineral water to the foreigners in a park and then collapsed. The Japanese worked like titans to dig out the people caught in the houses.

"All boats in the harbor took refugees. Food was short."

Kokura, the home of the Gorhams, is noted for its freedom from earthuakes and Tokio for the frequency of quakes. At Kokura there are only four American families residing. Mr. Gorham is consulting engineer for a large firm in Japan that has a number of factories throughout the country.

LEGION NEWS

For God and Country, we associate ourselves together for the following purposes: To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a one hundred per cent Americanism; to preserve the memories and incidents of our association in the Great War; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make right the master of might; to promote peace and good will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of Justice, freedom and democracy; to consecrete and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness.—Preamble to the Constitution of the American Legion.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 2.—How airplanes can be refueled with gas in the air without interrupting their flight will be demonstrated to San Franciscans during the American Legion national convention here October 15 to 19.

Lieutenants Richter and Smith, who first accomplished this difficult feat recently at San Diego, have been ordered with their planes to duplicate their famous stunt for the benefit of the 150,000 Legionnaires and guests gathered here for the convention.

Major General Mason M. Patrick of the air service department, Washington, D. C., has also informed Major Harris C. Allen, convention aviation chairman, that the army will send planes from Rockwell field to reinforce the Crissey field flying squadron in its competition with the best navy and civilian airmen in the country.

More than a score of aviators already have entered in the American Legion annual air derby to be held during the big conclave. The glider contest, in which motorless planes will compete for a $5000 prize hung up by Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, has been assured of internationally famed entrants.

Chalmer Day, commander of Glendale Post No. 127, American Legion, has just received credentials from the state headquarters so that identification certificates may be issued to all Legionnaires going to the national convention to be held at San Francisco on October 15 to 19 entitling them to half fares. The half fares cannot be obtained unless these identification certificates are secured. Any member of the local post anticipating attending the national convention should report to the Legion hall on Friday night or get in touch with Comrade Ivan A. Crocker of West Burchett street.

At the regular meeting of the American Legion auxiliary held Monday night at the Legion hall, 610 East Broadway, with Mrs. Margaret Kaeding presiding, report was given by Mrs. Nellie Snow Hyer on a visit to the Sawtelle home made by herself and Mrs. Kaeding and Mrs. W. B. Kelly recently. They found a good deal of want among the ex-service boys there who are not receiving any compensation. A complete outfit of clothing was furnished to one of the boys at the home.

Today the newspaper campaign for the grave endowment fund begins. This is for the purpose of securing money to make a permanent fund for the care of the graves of soldiers, especially those in France. Mrs. E. W. Gilliland is the chairman of the local auxiliary.

Mrs. Charles T. Jones gave an account of the dinner given in Los Angeles last week in honor of the national president, Dr. Kate Barrett.

Nine of the members of the Glendale auxiliary are planning to attend a luncheon and meeting of the county council at Monrovia on Friday of this week, including Mrs. Margaret Kaeding, Mrs. L. T. Rowley, Mrs. James McBryde, Mrs. N. W. McBryde, Mrs. Mary Drake, Mrs. Nellie Snow Hyer, Mrs. C. A. Nagle, Mrs. G. H. Rowe and Mrs. E. W. Gilliland.

The Glendale auxiliary is planning a food sale to be held on Saturday, October 13. Instead of an afternoon session, there will be an evening meeting on October 15 when several new members will be initiated.

This New Treatment Never Fails to End Piles

Many sufferers from Piles or Hemorrhoids have become despondent because they have been led to believe that their case was hopeless and that there was nothing in the world to help them.

To these people we say, "Go to your druggist and get an original box of MOAVA SUPPOSITORIES." One of these inserted into the rectum according to directions will be found to give immediate relief. They reach the source of the trouble and by their soothing, healing, antiseptic action first allay the pain and soreness and then by direct contact with the ulcers and piles cause them to heal up and disappear forever.

It's simply wonderful how speedily they act. Blessed relief often comes in two days. Even in cases that have steadily resisted all known treatments, marvelous results have been obtained.

All druggists dispense MOAVA SUPPOSITORIES in the original box or can get it for you on short notice.—Adv.

NEW OPTOMETRIC FIRM LOCATING IN GLENDALE

Edwin H. Armstrong and Arthur E. Hoare, for the last several years prominent in state and county optometric activities and for the last five years members of the faculty of the Los Angeles School of Optometry, announce the opening of a complete, modern and well equipped optometric office at 104 East Broadway, having taken a long time lease on the west half of the building occupied by the Ray L. Cole jewelry firm.

Dr. Armstrong, an instructor in practical and technical optics and modern professional procedure, has been engaged in optometry and in the optical business for the last 15 years, covering all branches. During the war he served as a captain in the Canadian infantry and saw two years' service in France. He is at present managing editor of the California Optometrist, the official publication of the state association, as well as being vice-president in charge of public information and a lecturer in the statewide educational course being conducted for optometrists under the auspices of the state association.

Dr. Hoare has had nine years professional experience, the last two years being with the College of Optometry as clinical instructor and professor of psychology and practical optometry. During the war Dr. Hoare served four years with the Australian forces of the British army, and saw service in both Egypt and France. He is at present secretary of the state association of optometrists and of the state league for the conservation of vision, as well as being a lecturer on the educational course of the state body, having returned a few days ago from a lecture tour to the principal cities of Northern California. Both Dr. Armstrong and Dr. Hoare also have served as instructors in the post-graduate courses given at the College of Optometry, Los Angeles.

The opening of the new optometric offices here will put Glendale on an equal footing with Los Angeles for high class optometric service. The new offices have been fitted up to compare favorably with any in the Southland in the correction of defects of the eye.

"Confidence in the future growth of Glendale was the dominating factor in our decision to locate here," stated Dr. Armstrong today. "For the last month we have made a close survey of conditions in virtually every city in Southern California, and finally decided on Glendale as the logical city in which to establish our business."

Just Chatter

He's such a noisy little fellow and every morning for the past week he's awakened me from my slumbers by his merry song as he sings and swings from a tree outside my window. And every morning I've told him to beat it and sing his melodies in some other tree, for I love him and all that sort of thing, but I didn't like to get up so early. And whether or not he understood or was just plain frightened I shall never know, and I hope he wasn't frightened, for I wouldn't have him so for the world, but anyway, each morning he'd disappear for a while, only to return later and start all over again. He sure was a happy bird.

This morning I was awakened as usual and going to the window, there he was, big as day, perky and proud as a city alderman, singing away for dear life, and who was with him but his mate, a cute little bunch of feathers and song. And I smiled and was happy, congratulated them and told them to keep right on singing, and I put out some crumbs for the wedding breakfast. And as I returned to bed I began to realize his happiness the past week, for were I the intended groom of a sweet little mate like his I'd sing, too—at least for a week.

Rotarians Make Their Bow As Editorial Writers

GLENDALE DAILY PRESS GIVES VIEWS OF EMBRYO EDITORIAL SCRIBBLERS

"Views" Not Only by th e Camera, But From the Swift Moving Pencils of These Whole-Hearted Citizens of Glendale

QUESTIONS BEFORE CITIZENS ALL SOLVED?

"Civic Center," "Junior High School," "Sewers for Glendale," Community Chest," Are Vitals Subjects Treated by These Earnest Writers.

At the meeting of the Glendale Rotary club last Thursday, held in the Glendale Press auditorium with Thomas D. Watson, editor of the Press, as host, a novel stunt devised for the occasion was the grouping of the guests at four tables, each with a captain, to prepare editorials on the four paramount projects before the people of Glendale today, namely: "Civic Center," by table No. 1, George Karr, captain; "Junior High School," table No. 2, Dick White, captain; "Sewers for Glendale," table No. 3, Jim Rhoades, captain; "Community Chest," table No. 4, Art Dibbern, captain. Each member of each group was to write his ideas of the subject assigned his table and from these symposiums a compact editorial expression was formulated. These are presented below.

The cut accompanying this article shows the members of the Rotary club in attendance at this unique affair, the members of the Sunset orchestra, that furnished such splendid music and a few of the Methodist ladies who furnished the delightful "eats."

CIVIC CENTER

Editorial by Team No. 1, Rotary luncheon, Thursday, September 27, Captained by George Karr:

Glendale having progressed in every other direction in her aspirations for metropolitan honors, she now is certainly entitled to a real civic center, where all city offices and the postoffice can be located and where a swimming pool and recreation center will be ideally placed.

With the site of the present high school fitted up as a civic center, all the objects above named would be attained and few cities in the Southland could compare with Glendale for ideality of location. A large civic auditorium could be made a feature, also, and thus the want of the city be provided for for years to come.

Now is the time to strike, and strike hard for the securing of this needed improvement, which is of such paramount importance. It must not be overlooked. We have neglected so many opportunities in the past and have no central park, so a civic center is now a vital necessity. We owe it to the youth of the present generation, as well as of succeeding ones, that a playground in the heart of the city, easily reached from every direction, be provided. It would also be a distinct asset to the city, as is Brookside park to Pasadena.

All we need to secure it is concentration, application, jollification, moderation, then realization.

JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOLS

Editorial by Team No. 2, Rotary luncheon, Thursday, September 27.

The following comments written by Team No. 2, Rotary luncheon of Thursday, September 27, are quoted Verbatim:

The "six, three and three plan," is now the generally accepted form of school organization throughout the country. Under this plan the junior high school forms the connecting link between the elementary school of six years and the senior high school of three years, the junior high school itself having a term of three years.

It is difficult to state in a brief paragraph reasons for a junior high school, but I shall attempt to do so here as far as the space permits.

In the first place it is of very great value to have under the same roof all of the children who are in approximately the same stage of mental development. One of the values of such an arrangement is that all disciplinary rules of the school can be made to fit the child of the age from twelve to fifteen who cannot properly be governed by the rules of either the elementary or the senior high school.

In the second place under this arrangement the course of study in the third year junior high school can be made a real connecting link between the elementary school and the senior high school. In other words the course of study can be much more efficiently arranged where the grades from the seventh to the twelfth inclusive are divided on the basis of three and three, rather than on the basis of two and four.

In the third place the junior high school program is so arranged as to afford a training for the child which will enable him to fit into the senior high school without a break.

The fourth argument, and not the least important, is that children who will probably not complete a high school course can, in the junior high school, be given work much better for their particular needs than can be done in a school otherwise organized.

Altogether the need for junior high schools under the present state of development of the Glendale schools is practically imperative.

In my mind a junior high school is absolutely essential as it takes up the slack between the grammar and the high schools, a need felt by parents of children who come in that category.

Junior high schools are essential to students after reaching the period in their lives when they should be grouped together with boys and girls their own age both in studies and in recreation.

In the elementary schools the children from the ages of six to fourteen years are all in the same building, this condition having a decided effect on the younger boys and girls as they will naturally follow the actions of the older children.

One of the great values of a junior high school is the fact that it encourages students who do not contemplate going to high school to continue their education.

Records show that many students who would ordinarily leave school at the completion of the eighth grade stay for the additional year and often complete the full high school course. In any case the student has offered one year of valuable education that he probably would not obtain under the ordinary grammar and high school program.

SEWERS

Editorial by Team No. 3, Rotary luncheon, Thursday, September 27, captained by Jim Rhoades:

The prospect of an outfall sewer connection, so that every residence, business house, hotel and factory in Glendale can be assured of ample sewer facilities, is most gratifying to all who believe in an absolutely clean city, physically as well as morally.

Although the first cost seems high, the incalculable benefits to be derived from such a system will far more than compensate for any outlay. And the cost will return to each property owner many fold, in the increased valuation of his holdings.

Sewerage will not only encourage the building of more hotels, factories, business houses and residences, but will insure a much more healthful city, in fact it is the greatest need by far of any city and its establishment means greater population, as well as many other superior advantages.

Great credit is due our city fathers for their untiring effors which at last have brought about this greatly desired improvement.

COMMUNITY CHEST

Editorial by Team No. 4, Rotary luncheon, Thursday, September 27, captained by Art Dibbern:

The Community Chest is a movement based on good will and service to those in our city who require financial aid. It gives an opportunity for all to contribute, which is essentially a privilege.

It is a panacea for the "Gimmes"—it is like Castoria, for it is so easy to take and so effective. It affords the principal giver, "the business man," a means to figure intelligently on his donations and the hearty approval of all Rotarians is pledged to its support.

THEOSOPHISTS IN NEW LODGE HALL, 113 S. ORANGE

At the opening last night of the new Theosophical quarters, 112 S. Orange street, Rev. Irving S. Cooper discussing "What Is Modern Theosophy?" especially stressed the very broad scope included in this teaching. He noted how the great fundamental truths of all the seven world religions, as Hinduism, Buddhism, Mohammedanism, Confucianism, Zorasterianism, Jewish and Christian, are the same. Coming as they do from the one source of all Truth—God—it would be impossible for them not to have the same underlying principles. It was man's interpretations of the divine messages, given by the great world teachers, which perverted the truth and made the outer forms and ceremonies so different.

Speaking further he showed how theosophy is not a new cult, but that its purest teachings were given by Plato and Pythagoras, the latter of whom wrote in the 6th century B. C. The great purpose of the Theosophical society is to revive and re-establish the great fundamental truths taught in the early days of Christianity as well as in all the other great religions of the world.

In closing he conclusively proved that brotherhood and service are the two most dominent notes struck in this ancient teaching in its effort to lift the race higher on the ladder of evolution.

FLYWEIGHT GRID TEAM LATEST INNOVATION

110 Pounders Form Football Team at Glendale High

The unconquerable spirit of the Glendale High School is again manifested in the fact that a one hundred and ten pound football team is being organized. The team will be under the leadership of Coach Wolfe. He is quoted as saying that there are some excellent players in his aggregation who might prove to be good candidates for a bigger team, at some later date.

These wee, one hundred and ten pounders have fallen into the work with a will. Each afternoon they may be seen practicing on Glendale's pigskin battlefield, among the brawn and beef of the varsity. But they are not in the least dismayed by these giants. They take everything as a natural happening.

The coach hopes that if he accomplishes nothing else he will at least teach the team the fundamentals of clean, honest, upright sportsmanship, which is in the end the greatest asset to any team. The younger boys of the school do not get the advantages to learn these things as the older boys. They are, for the most part, restricted by circumstances to disorganize games, and have not the opportunity to work with each other on the field, nor to encounter teams from other schools. It is hoped that with the organized team of the smaller boys, more spirit and interest for football may be created among those who have not the size to play on the varsity or lightweight eleven.

The candidates for the team who seem to show the most promise of being stars are, Vearn (Blinky) Wilson, Art Cressy, David Ward, Clayton Lowe, Shirley Miller, Frank Thompson, Harold Begg, Frank Gatton, Richard Stone, Elen Case and Colon Harris. These men will probably be, with one or two alterations, the principal players. Among other players who show promise are Vernon Foster, Wm. Hunsinger, Harry Clark, Linonell Grindell, Joe Edwards, and Jack Grayson. There is no league for this team, but the coach is assured that he can secure some opposition from the city schools. He is going to "sic" his wee pigskinner on to Butterfield's, lightweight second team. Here will be some fun for the enthusiastic football fans. These games will be fast and hard fought and a good example of football playing. (Butterfield's players are no slackers in the art of football.)

The feature players of the team are Wilson, the signal linguist; Ward, the captain of airial attacks; and Miler an Lowe, the punters.

The team is set and ready to go. They are a part of the good old school, give them a hand.

185,947 FANS PAID $605,475 FOR 1922 SERIES

[By Associated Press]

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—The short world's series of 1922, in which the New York Giants won four games and tied one with the New York Yankees, drew 185,947 fans through the turnstiles. They paid $605,475 in admissions.

The record attendance for world's series was set in 1921 when 269,977 persons saw the Giants win from the Yankees in eight games. In 1912, in the eight game series between the Boston Red Sox and the New York Giants, 252,237 fans attended and in 1919 when Cincinnati defeated the Chicago White Sox, there were 236,928 paid admissions. So while the 1922 attendance was fourth in point of numbers it set a new record for average attendance.

The fifth and final contest of the series also established a new record for single game receipts for all time, the total "gate" being $125,147.

HUGGINS IS THE REAL THING AS A MANAGER

Yankee Pilot, Devoid of Spectacular Appeal, Achieves Results

By HENRY L. FARRELL
United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Oct. 2 (United Press).—In winning his third straight American League pennant with the New York Yankees, Miller Huggins, the little manager of the team, accomplished something that should rate for him a place among the real managerial leaders of baseball.

Huggins never has been able to get the credit that he deserved for meritorious performances in the past, largely because he did not seek glory or the spootlight, and even now, when any other manager would be acclaimed for taking three pennants in succession, the little Yank boss is still being panned.

New York never has taken to Huggins and the comment is still being heard that anyone ought to win a flock of pennants with a million dollar team and that the Yankees won the pennant again this year, not because of their manager, but in spite of him.

Huggins lacks the spectacular color of McGraw, he is not a mixer like Uncle Wilbert Robinson, he is not as picturesque as Kid Gleason and he lacks the outward qualities of leadership that are embodied in Frank Chance. He seldom deserts the darkness of the dugout and he goes about his way quietly and gets results.

The Yankee manager has shown no great ability as a developer of young players since he took the New York club, although he has had a part in making Ward and Meusel. But in his position no other manager would care to saddle himself with the responsibilities and gamble with young players. Developing youngsters is a big problem. Connie Mack has failed at it for seven years, and Mack had a great reputation for bringing along young players.

When Huggins was given the Yanks he was commissioned to get a winner and something to compete against the Giants as an attraction. Had Huggins been the greatest miracle man in the world in developing young players, he could not have gotten together a pennant winning team in the short space of time demanded by his employers.

He found himself in a fortunate position where the owners were willing and able to buy the players that Huggins decided would work well with his combination.

Huggins at least did show some real good judgment in buying players. No other great stars that Huggins let go can be found on other teams like the castoffs of the Giants in the National League. The players that Huggins disposed of never caused him a regret while those he acquired delivered for him better than they were expected to do.

The smartest move made by Huggins was his recommendation for the purchase of Babe Ruth. The great Swat King proved a very profitable investment for the club owners after they were accused of being crazy by rival club owners for paying such a huge sum of money for the Babe.

The craftiness of the little manager was also shown last winter when he secured Herb Pennock from the Boston Red Sox. His critics said he was foolish to dispose of young Murray, a promising pitcher; McMillan, a young infielder, and other players in the deal, but those players failed to make good with the Red Sox, and Pennock, who had been regarded as through, turned out in his new uniform to be one of the best pitchers in the league.

Even with a million dollars behind him and the permission to buy and sell as the manager sees fit, it is not a cinch to go out and make no mistakes on the market.

Huggins has made few mistakes in his investments.

Manager Miller Huggins' men have earned the right for the third year in succession to meet the National league champions in the world's series—and this time they are going to win, they say. The photo shows (eltf to right) top row: Doc. Woods, trainer; Haines, outfielder; Smith, outfielder; Pennock, pitcher; Hofmann; catcher; R. Meusel, outfielder; Ruth, pitcher; Pipp, first base; Dugan, third base; Jones, pitcher; Scott, shortstop; Ben Shields, pitcher. Middle row: Bush, pitcher; Shawkey, pitcher; Witt, outfielder; O'Leary, coach; Huggins, manager; Schang, catcher; Mays, pitcher; Ward, third base; Roettger, pitcher. Bottom row: Johnson, infielder; Bengough, catcher; Pipgras, pitcher; Eddie Bennett, mascot; McNally, infielder; Gazella, infielder, and Hendricks outfielder.

GLENDALE GRID STARS TAKE ON PASADENA HIGH

Locals Will Journey to Crown City This Afternoon

After administering a stinging defeat to the Oxnard high eleven, the fast Glendale high school footballers will journey to Pasadena this afternoon, where they will take on the Crown City gridders.

It is probable that Coach Haynurst will experiment with his line up, and will use a different combination than the one that played Saturday. Not that he is dissatisfied, but just that he wants to try them all out.

The local boys have been playing an exceptionally fine brand of football to date. On the offensive they are good for yards at any time, while on the defensive they can hold a wild steer from scoring. They have not been scored on in the three games played to date.

Friday they will take on the Franklin high aggregation on the local field. After a few more practice games, the Central League season will open on October 19.

On Armistice day the Glendale high school team will take on the Van Nuys gridders in an exhibition game on the local field. This should be an exceptionally fast game as both teams are going good.

TROJANS PREPARE FOR POMONA

After going through a particularly tough contest last Saturday, and winning by an 18 to 7 score, Coach Elmer Henderson's University of Southern California eleven is working hard to perfect the machine for the struggle with Pomona this week. The Trojans did not look like a championship team in their first encounter. The Caltech eleven scored a touchdown, and just missed a second one on the Trojan squad. The Trojans failed to show the class that will be necessary to beat California on November 10. Their backfield was anything but smooth, although the line seemed to be in fairly good shape.

That the U. S. C. eleven will be strong once the season gets under way there is no doubt. In their opening contest the Trojans appeared rather weak, but nevertheless they will present a strong front once they get going. There is plenty of individual material, all that is lacking at the present time is team work and co-ordination. That is what Henderson is working to perfect, especially in the backfield.

The Trojans meet Pomona Saturday. Numerous reports have been circulated as to the strength of the Sagehens. It will not be so much the score as the showing of team work on the part of the Trojans that will produce the interest in this game. The Trojans got off to a bad start. Whether they are what they are generally believed to be will be demonstrated at that time.

MORE POWER TO THE LOCAL BOUTS

Les Marston, local boxing promoter, plans to stage boxing bouts in Hahn's Hall, on North Brand, between Wilson and Broadway, every Tuesday night beginning October 16. Jim Bird and McGloflin will be the main attraction at the first event. It is our opinion that the advent of boxing in this city, under the proper supervision, will fill a long felt want among the sporting fans of Glendale and vicinity. For a long time local fight fans have been forced to go to Venice, Hollywood and Vernon to see boxing matches. They have felt that they were entitled to bouts here at home, and now they have them. Marston has started the thing off right, and he is going to see it through. He believes in fights if they are conducted in the right manner, and he is going to see to it that the bouts he stages are on the level in every way, and that there will be no cause for criticism of the manner in which they are conducted.

HAS S. B. U. C. A REAL FOOTBALL TEAM?

The feat that the Southern Branch footballers nearly met defeat at the hands of the Freshmen of the same institution does not mean that the Cubs are going to have a weak team this season. They were able to come out of it long enough to score a touchdown and convert in the last few minutes of play and win by a 7 to 6 score.

There are several ways of accounting for the results. One of these is the Cub Freshmen squad. The Bruin Peagreeners are an exceptionally fine lot of football players. They showed a lot of class. Hastings at center and Barnett at full put up an unusually fine game. The Frosh speak well for the Southern Branch prospects in future years.

Then the fact that the Cubs have only had two weeks of practice, and very little scrimmage work might account for their showing in action. They did no passing during the entire contest. They have taken no passing in their workouts to date. Passing will begin this week.

When you consider that the two teams were using the same style of football and the same system of signals it is not so difficult to account for the outcome. The Cubs are working hard, and have three weeks yet before the first Conference game. This Saturday they will meet La Verne at Moore Field. La Verne is not very well known, and has little or nothing in the way of a football team. Nevertheless the game will give the Cubs a good opportunity to get into action and to show that they can play real football when they have developed all of their plays.

PLANS PROGRESS FOR TOURNAMENT AT HIGH SCHOOL

Plans for the inter-class tennis tournament are progressing rapidly, with about thirty-five contestants signed up. Playing will probably begin sometime this week.

An entrance fee of fifteen cents is being charged so that a penant or trophy can be awarded. This promises to make the tournament all the more interesting.

Many of G. U. H. S. racket tossers are showing up on the courts these days. In fact, it is rather hard to find a time when the courts are empty. The coming tournament seems to be responsible for some of this activity.

Bob Laird says that he hopes a good many more will come out but that today will be about the last day to sign up. If fifty don't sign up, he may have to abandon the inter-class idea. He hopes to have the list of entrants posted by tomorrow so that play may begin.

AMERICAN LEAGUE VICTOR IN TEN WORLD'S SERIES

[By Associated Press]

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—American League clubs have been victors in ten of the eighteen world's series played since 1905.

Of the eight championships won by National League pennant winners, the Giants hold three, 1905, and 1921 and 1922. Frank Chance won with his Chicago Cubs in 1907 and 1908, while Pittsburgh, the Boston Braves and Cincinnati each have been victorious once.

The Boston Red Sox won four series for the American League, and the Philadelphia Athletes accounted for three. The Chicago White Sox won twice and Cleveland was victorious in 1920.

"Incidental expenses" cover a multitude of sinful items.

WHITTIER IS DUE TO PULL BIG SURPRISE

Quakers Slated to Stage Comeback This Year, Say Wise Ones

That Whittier college is due for a comeback on the gridiron this year is the opinion of many football authorities in the Southern Conference league. The proteges of Coach Perry are doped to more than make up for their small showing last season and perhaps drag down another championship, as in 1921.

Under the experienced guidance of Carl Buckner, former Iowa star, a line probably equal in strength to that of two years ago is under development. Compton, Benke, Shaffer, Buckmaster, Jessup, Reinhart and Madden are those who will be depended upon to stop all attacks on the forward department. The latter player was one of the glimmerers on the '21 squad.

Although last year's showing of Suggett, famous half-back of the Poets, was far from impressive, due to an injury, rumors are to the effect that he will be back to his old form that won him honorable mention on Walter Camp's national eleven in 1921. Others of note who will decorate the backfield are Jones, Ferguson, Rohrbaugh and Weightman.

With a long list of former high school stars on the field, the freshmen coaches will undoubtedly produce an eleven of no mean calibre. The frosh are out to show up the heavyweights, according to reports.

CARPENTIER WINS BY KNOCKOUT IN TWENTY SECONDS

Beckett Floored Early in First Round; Champ Seeks American Match

LONDON, Oct. 2.—It took Georges Carpentier, the French fighter, just about twenty seconds last night to put the quietus on the championship aspirations of Joe Beckett, who holds the heavyweight title in Great Britain. Carpentier used both lefts and rights in a brief series of exchanges, and Beckett remained on the floor for the final count.

The two men received a great ovation when they entered the ring for their twenty-round bout, and for a fleeting moment Beckett was wreathed in smiles. His supporters, however, could hardly have witnessed a speedier or greater disappointment than awaited them.

Beckett led with a light left to his oppónent's jaw, but there was no power in the blow and Carpentier shot over a left, followed by a right to Beckett's jaw with terrible force, and Beckett went down for a count of five.

The Englishman got to his feet rather groggy and the Frenchman dashed in and with right and left beat Beckett down again near the ropes, falling on top of him. On rising, Carpentier stood back. Beckett gripped the bottom rope in an effort to pull himself to his feet, but he was so badly spent that apparently he had lost all sense of what was going on, and before the count had been completed his seconds threw in the towel and thus ended one of the quickest and most sensational of heavyweight contests.

After the fight Carpentier said it was all over so quickly that there was nothing to talk about. Asked about his future plans, he replied:

"I am off to America next month and if I beat Tom Gibbons, I expect to meet Dempsey again. I hope so, indeed."

LOCAL BOWLERS ENTERED IN BIG LEAGUE AFFAIR

The Radio Gasoline bowling team will be the entry from Glendale in the Major Bowling League, composed of the best teams in Los Angeles county. The home games of the Radio Gas team will be played at the Glendale Recreation Club alleys, in the Jensen building on North Brand.

The personelle of the team for the opening games will be as follows: F. Brehme, F. Covell, F. Roder, A. Amstey and Peter Neise. Tonight the team will play the Harry Lloyd team in the first game of the league schedule at the Broadway alleys, Los Angeles.

WOLFE TO FORM CLASSES FOR MAT MEN

Grapplers and Boxers to Organize at High School

Coach Wolfe has at last completed his plans for a boxing and wrestling class. Mat men of both types ling class at Glendale High. Mat men of both types have been eagerly awaiting this announcement and are anxious to start work immediately.

There will only be allowed twenty-five men in each class as Wolfe wishes to be able to give more personal instruction. On account of this smaller number, aspirants will be forced to sign up early if they wish to enter either of the classes.

These two sports were played up quite a good deal last year, especially wrestling. An interesting tournament was held in the latter, and the winners in each class represented Glendale Hi in a match with Long Beach. The Red and Black grapplers succeeded in carrying off the honors in this, and thus proved that there was considerable talent in our halls of learning.

Boxing was also a success last year and several fast bouts were staged at the annual Boys' Stag party. "Sailor" Wolfe knows how to teach our future pugilists so that they will be well able to wield a hefty fist in a ring contest.

The date set for the opening of the classes has not been definitely decided upon yet, but it will probably be the last of this week or the fore part of next. The period will probably be the fifth in the forenoon. Although this time may be difficult for some of the upperclassmen, Wolfe feels that it is the only period that gives all of the students a chance to try out.

Some of the wrestlers who showed up good last year and will be strong men this season are Walton, Ryan, Horii, Haig, C. Thompson, D. Elliott, Payne, Fish and several others.

Stockel, West, Thayer, Gingery and others showed up well with the gloves and will probably be out this year.

With all this good material, the new men will have to work hard if they want to enter any contests.

MARY BARBARA TAYLOR WINS IN TENNIS FINALS

Semi-finals in the Girls' Tennis tournament under Community Service played Saturday afternoon on the high school courts by Charlotte Hawkinson and Alberta Plasterer, Charlotte Hawkinson winning 6-0, 6-1. Charlotte Hawkinson and Mary Barbara Taylor then played the finals which were won by the latter—6-1, 6-3.

Mary Barbara Taylor is therefore champion of girls and winner of the trophy offered by the Glendale Daily Press.

The exterior shows conclusively the careful study and competent executed efforts embodied, and the interior is divided into one of the most satisfying arrangements you could hope to find. The living room, a spacious affair with high cove ceiling; the patio with fountain, cement floor, art-leaded glass skylight; three bed rooms with large, airy closets; two baths; the breakfast room, one of the most attractive you have ever seen, and a kitchen that's a model of perfection.

Adopt this plan to build from and you will be one of the proudest home owners in the world.

Price is a Poor Thing to Judge By When You Buy Lumber

What you buy is simply a tree cut up into lumber, and in different lengths. The tree itself could be had quite cheaply. Price is not what you are looking for. NO, you buy lumber all ready cut and milled, the work of assembling it is left with your carpenter or contractor. The more nearly finished it is, the more it is worth to you.

This has been the sane way the Bentley Lumber Co. have always looked at the matter.

Accordingly, Bentley Lumber is always sold as complete as possible, never skimped and left unfinished to meet a price. You buy QUALITY when you buy Bentley Lumber.

Our own DRY KILN insures for you, finish lumber that will stand the test of the ages. It costs you no more to buy Bentley Better Finish. Insist on lumber that is correctly dried, and then not allowed to deteriorate by standing or traveling in open cars, standing in great piles at a sea port, to absorb the moisture that has once been extracted.

We invite you to inspect our merchandise.

LEGIONNAIRES TO ASK LEGISLATION AT CONVENTION

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 2 (United Press).—The American Legion at its national convention in San Francisco October 15 to 19 will take a stand on numerous questions of international and national policy, as well as problems relating purely to affairs of the veterans, according to reports received at national headquarters here.

Resolutions adopted at the various state conventions during the last few months and which will in turn be presented at the national gathering embrace many problems of national concern.

One of the principal issues to come before the gathering in San Francisco is the question of the convocation of an international air disarmament conference. The movement was started a few months ago by Commander Owsley through The Legion Weekly.

A poll taken of all United States senators, Congressmen, newspaper editors, college presidents and other prominent citizens expressed overwhelming indorsement of the Legion's proposal to hold an international gathering in Washington to reduce military air forces.

Recommendations made by a number of state conventions of the Legion are that the national body should continue its campaign for the conference until President Coolidge agrees to invite the European nations to confer.

The Legion claims the support of a number of national leaders for the prpoosed gathering, including Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, and others.

Immigration Proposition

A proposal to suspend all immigration to this country for a period of five years is certain to receive the consideration of the Legionnaires. The Legion's national Americanization commission has maintained a steady flow of propaganda favoring total exclusion, and 400,000 school children are writing upon the subject, "Why America Should Prohibit Immigration for Five Years," in the Legion's national essay contest.

State convention resolutions charge that present immigration laws are unsatisfactory, because 800,000 aliens have been permitted to enter the country during the past year, nearly twice the quota actually authorized by law.

Americanization for foreigners already in America is proposed in a number of resolutions to be presented at the national gathering. Means suggested are compulsory government schools for aliens, registration of all persons of foreign birth, and a broadening of the scope of patriotic work of Legion posts among foreigners.

It is also suggested that the Legion support a bill providing for the deportation of foreigners who have not become citizens within five years after they come to this country.

Russian Recognition

The Iowa department will propose a resolution protesting the recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States. The resolution occasioned a sharp tilt between Hanford MacNider, past national commander of the Legion, and Senator Brookhart, a Legion member, at the Iowa gathering.

Alaska will propose the creation of a "floating court" to naturalize foreigners.

All indications are that adjusted compensation will be again indorsed at the national gathering. Almost all state conventions held to date have expressed approval of the "bonus" measure, which provides a choice of land settlement, home aid, vocational training and adjusted back pay, based on the length of service, to all men who served during the war.

Adjusted compensation received the unanimous vote of the last two conventions and Legion leaders say the sentiment for compensation is increasing in the ranks of the organization this year.

The welfare of disabled veterans will be considered in many details at San Francisco. Many state conventions have gone on record favoring the liberalization of the Sweet bill to provide compensation for several thousand veterans who do not come within the present regulations, particularly veterans suffering with tubercular and neuropathetic diseases.

A number of states desire the construction of additional hospitals by the United States Veterans' Bureau.

The convention is expected to express a strong sentiment in favor of the retirement of disabled emergency officers on the same status as those of the regular army.

Care of Orphans

Another problem to be discussed will be the care of orphans of deceased veterans of the war. A Legion committee has predicted that within eleven years after the close of the war 35,000 children of war veterans will need care.

Various state organizations will bring resolutions favoring American participation in an international court of justice.

Creation of a standing committee in the house of representatives to consider all veterans' legislation is the subject of another resolution.

The Legion is expected to reaffirm its stand for a universal draft of capital, labor and industry as well as man power in the event of another war.

TIMELY TIPS FOR AUTO THE OWNER

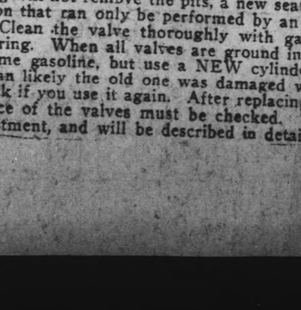
By E. H. SCOTT

How to Tune Up the Engine for Power and Economy

To tune up and obtain the maximum amount of power from your engine, the "compression" in all cylinders must be good. Perhaps you do not know exactly what this term means, yet the amount of power your engine develops depends to a very large extent on the amount of "compression" in each cylinder. An explanation of the way an engine operates will make the meaning of "compression" clear.

An automobile engine operates on what is called the four-stroke principle. Starting, we will say, with the piston at the top of the cylinder, as soon as the engine starts, the piston commences to move down. As it does so, the Intake Valve opens, and through this Valve a charge of gasoline mixture is drawn into the cylinder.

When the piston reaches the bottom of the cylinder, the Intake Valve closes and the piston commences to move up the cylinder, and compresses the charge drawn in on the Intake Stroke into a small space at the top of the cylinder. This is called the "Compression Stroke." The more highly the mixture is compressed, the more power the engine develops. If the Valves, Piston Rings, Cylinder Head gaskets or Spark Plug gaskets leak, part of the mixture escapes, then the pressure is reduced, causing a loss of power, and uneven running of the engine.



To test the compression, first let the engine warm up by running for a short time, then remove all spark plugs but the one in No. 1 cylinder. Now turn off the Ignition switch, but open the throttle wide open, then insert the starting crank and "feel" the amount of compression or resistance there is in the cylinder, when you press down on the crank. Do not force the handle right down at first, but "see saw" it up and down, and "feel" the resistance, which should be quite strong and "springy." Test each cylinder in turn in this way. The resistance should be the same in each cylinder. Poor compression may be caused by (1) Leaking Piston Rings, (2) Pitted or Sticking Valves, (3) Insufficient clearance between the Valve Stem and Tappet, (4) Cylinder Head or Spark Plug Gaskets leaking.

Worn, stuck, or broken piston rings or scored cylinder walls allow a loss of compression between the piston and the cylinder wall. This trouble can be detected by having some one turn the engine over slowly with the starting crank while you place your ear near the oil filler hole and listen. If there is a leak at the piston you will hear a hissing sound in the crank case. This trouble can only be cured by an expert mechanic. If there appears to be no hissing sound in the crank case when the engine is turned over, then you are fairly safe in concluding that the Piston rings are all right, but that the Valves require grinding in.

To grind in the valves, first drain the radiator, and while it is draining, remove all spark plugs. Next disconnect the hose at the cylinder head, then remove all cylinder head nuts or bolts. The cylinder head can now be removed. The first thing you will notice is a heavy deposit of carbon on top of the pistons and the cylinder head. This must be removed before you start to grind in the valves. Be careful not to allow any chips of carbon to get into the bolt holes or into the water jacket holes.

When you have the carbon cleaned out, remove the valve springs. The illustration shows a very simple and quick way to do this. Hold down the head of the valve while you pry up the spring to remove the cotter or washer under the valve retaining washer. Now pull out the valve, then the valve spring can be pulled out. Replace the valve for the time being in the cylinder until you are ready to grind it in. Make sure that the valve is seated. First clean the valve and the valve seat with some gasoline, and make sure the stem is free from carbon. Smear a little grinding compound on the face of the valve, then put a light spring under the valve head, so that when pressure is released, the valve will be raised. Grind the valve by rotating to and fro with a brace and bit or one of the special valve grinding tools. Bear firmly but not heavily, and be careful not to make more than one-third to one-half turn before reversing direction, and occasionally let the valve rise up so as to give the grinding compound a chance to spread evenly, and also to prevent grooves being ground in the valve face and seat. When the valve presents a smooth silvery appearance all round, and all pits and black spots are removed, the valve is finished. Be VERY CAREFUL you do not let any of the grinding compound get down the valve guides or into the cylinder. If the valve is in such bad condition that grinding will not remove the pits, a new seat will have to be cut, an operation that can only be performed by an expert mechanic.

Clean the valve thoroughly with gasoline, then replace the valve spring. When all valves are ground in, clean the cylinder head with some gasoline, but use a NEW cylinder head gasket, for it is more than likely the old one was damaged when you took it off, and will leak if you use it again. After replacing the cylinder head, the clearance of the valves must be checked. This is a most important adjustment, and will be described in detail in next week's article.

TRILBY

by GEORGE DU MAURIER

So they lent her books—English books: Dickens, Thackeray, Walter Scott—which she devoured in the silence of the night, the solitude of her little attic in the Rue des Pousse-Cailloux, and new worlds were revealed to her. She grew more English every day; and that was a good thing.

Trilby speaking English and Trilby speaking French were two different beings. Trilby's English was more or less that of her father, a highly educated man; her mother, who was a Scotch woman, although an uneducated one, had none of the ungainliness that mars the speech of so many English women in that humble rank—no droppings of the h, no broadening of the o's and a's.

Trilby's French was that of the quartier latin—droll, slangy, piquant, quaint, picturesque—quite the reverse of ungainly, but in which there was scarcely a turn of phrase that would not stamp the speaker as being hopelessly, emphatically "no lady!" Though it was funny without being vulgar, it was perhaps a little too funny!

And she handled her knife and fork in the dainty English way, as no doubt her father had done—and his; and, indeed, when alone with them she was so absolutely "like a lady" that it seemed quite odd (though very seductive) to see her in a grisette's cap and dress and apron. So much for her English training.

But enter a Frenchman or two, and a transformation effected itself immediately—a new incarnation of Trilbyness—so droll and amusing that it was difficult to decide which of her two incarnations was the most attractive.

It must be admitted that she had her faults—like Little Billee.

For instance, she would be miserably jealous of any other woman who came to the studio, to sit or scrub or sweep or do anything else, even of the dirty tipsy old hag who sat for Taffy's "found drowned"—"as if she couldn't have sat for it herself!"

And then she would be cross and sulky, but not for long—an injured martyr, soon ready to forgive and be forgiven.

She would give up any sitting to come and sit to her three English friends. Even Durien had serious cause for complaint.

Then her affection was exacting; she always wanted to be told one was fond of her, and she dearly loved her own way, even in the sewing on of buttons and the darning of socks, which was innocent enough. But when it came to the cutting and fashioning of garments for a toreador's bride, it was a nuisance not to be borne!

"What could she know of toreadors' brides and their wedding dresses?" the Laird would indignantly ask—as if he were a toreador himself; and this was the aggravating side of her irrepressible Trilbyness.

In the caressing, demonstrative tenderness of her friendship she "made the soft eyes" at all three indiscriminately. But sometimes Little Billee would look up from his work as she was sitting to Taffy or the Laird, and find her gray eyes fixed on him with an all-enfolding gaze, so piercingly, penetratingly, unutterably sweet and kind and tender, such a brooding, dovelike look of soft and warm solicitude, that he would feel a flutter at his heart, and his hand would shake so that he could not paint; and in a waking dream he would remember that his mother had often looked at him like that when he was a small boy, and she a beautiful young woman untouched by care or sorrow; and the tear that always lay in readiness so close to the corner of Little Billee's eye would find it very difficult to keep itself in its proper place—unshed.

And at such moments the thought that Trilby sat for the figure would go through him like a knife.

She did not sit promiscuously to anybody who asked, it is true. But she still sat to Durien; to the great Gerome; to M. Carrel, who scarcely used any other model.

It was poor Trilby's sad distinction that she surpassed all other models as Calypso surpassed her nymphs; and whether by long habit, or through some obtuseness in her nature, or lack of imagination, she was equally unconscious of self with her clothes on or without! Truly, she could be naked and unashamed—in this respect an absolute savage.

She would have ridden through Coventry, like Lady Godiva—but without giving it a thought beyond wondering why the streets were empty and the shops closed and the blinds pulled down—would even have looked up to Peeping Tom's shutter with a friendly nod, had she known he was behind it!

In fact, she was absolutely without that kind of shame, as she was without any kind of fear. But she was destined soon to know both fear and shame.

Sometimes Trilby would bring her little brother to the studio in the Place St. Anatole des Arts, in his "beaux habits de Paques," his hair well curled and pomatumed, his hands and face well washed.

He was a very engaging little mortal. The Laird would fill his pockets full of Scotch goodies, and paint him as a little Spaniard in "Le Fils du Toreador," a sweet little Spaniard with blue eyes, and curly locks as light as tow, and a complexion of milk and roses, in singular and piquant contrast to his swarthy progenitor.

Taffy would use him as an Indian club or a dumbbell, to the child's infinite delight, and swing him on the trapeze, and teach him "la boxe."

And the sweetness and fun of his shrill, happy, infantile laughter (which was like an echo of Trilby's, only an octave higher) so moved and touched and tickled one that Taffy had to look quite fierce, so he might hide the strange delight of tenderness that somehow filled his manly bosom at the mere sound of it (lest Little Billee and the Laird should think him goody-goody); and the fiercer Taffy looked, the less this small mite was afraid of him.

Little Billee made a beautiful water-color sketch of him, just as he was, and gave it to Trilby, who gave it to le pere Martin, who gave it to his wife with strict injunctions not to sell it as an old master. Alas! it is an old master now, and Heaven only knows who has got it!

Those were happy days for Trilby's little brother, happy days for Trilby, who was immensely fond of him, and very proud. And the happiest day of all was when Trois Angliches took Trilby and Jeannot (for so the mite was called) to spend the Sunday in the woods at Meudon, and breakfast and dine at the garde champetre's. Swings, peep-shows, donkey-rides; shooting at a mark with cross-bows and little pellets of clay, and smashing little plaster figures and winning macaroons; losing one's self in the beautiful forest; catching newts and tadpoles and young frogs; making music on miriltons. Trilby singing "Ben Bolt" into a miriliton was a thing to be remembered, whether one would or no!

Trilby on this occasion came out in a new character, en demoiselle, with a little black bonnet, and a gray jacket of her own making.

To look at (but for her loose, square-toed, heelless silk boots laced up the inner side), she might have been the daughter of an English dean—until she undertook to teach the Laird some favorite can-can steps. And then the Laird himself, it must be admitted, no longer looked like the son of a worthy, God-fearing Sabbath-keeping Scotch solicitor.

This was after dinner, in the garden, at "la loge du garde champetre." Taffy and Jeannot and Little Billee made the necessary music on their miriltons, and the dancing soon became general, with plenty also to look on, for the garde had many customers who dined there on summer Sundays.

It is no exaggeration to say that Trilby was far and away the belle of that particular ball, and there have been worse balls in much finer company, and far plainer women!

Trilby lightly dancing the cancan (there are cancans and cancans) was a singularly gainly and seductive person—et vera incessu patuit dea! Here, again, she was funny without being vulgar. And for mere grace (even in the cancan), she was the forerunner of Miss Kate Vaughan; and, for sheer fun, the precursor of Miss Nelly Farren!

And the Laird, trying to dance after her ("dongsong le konkong," as he called it), was too funny for words; and if genuine popular success is a true test of humor, no greater humorist ever danced a pas seul.

What Englishmen could do in France during the fifties, and yet manage to preserve their self-respect, and even the respect of their respectable French friends!

"Voila l'espayce de hom ker jer swee!" said the Laird, every time he bowed in acknowledgment of the applause that greeted his performance of various solo steps of his own—Scotch reels and sword-dances that come in admirably. . . .

Then, one fine day, the Laird fell ill, and the doctor had to be sent for, and he ordered a nurse. But Trilby would hear of no nurses, not even a Sister of Charity! She did all the nursing herself, and never slept a wink for three successive days and nights.

On the third day the Laird was out of all danger, the delirium was past, and the doctor found poor Trilby fast asleep by the bedside.

Madame Vinard, at the bedroom door, put her finger to her lips, and whispered: "Quel bonheur! il est sauve, M. le Docteur; ecoutez! il dit ses prieres en Anglais, ce brave garcon!"

The good old doctor, who didn't understand a word of English, listened, and heard the Laird's voice, weak and low, but quite clear, and full of heart-felt fervor, intoning solemnly:

"'Green herbs, red peppers, mussels, saffron,
Soles, onions, garlic, roach, and dace—
All these you eat at Terre's Tavern
In that one dish of bouillabaisse!'"

"Ah, mais c'est tres bien de sa part, ce brave jeune homme! rendre graces au ciel comme cela, quand le danger est passe! tres bien, tres bien!"

Sceptic and Voltairian as he was, and not the friend of prayer, the good doctor was touched, for he was old, and therefore kind and tolerant, and made allowances.

And afterwards he said such sweet things to Trilby about it all, and about her admirable care of his patient, that she positively wept with delight—like sweet Alice with hair so brown, whenever Ben Bolt gave her a smile.

All this sounds very goody-goody, but it's true.

So it will be easily understood how the trois Angliches came in time to feel for Trilby quite a peculiar regard, and looked forward with sorrowful forebodings to the day when this singular and pleasant little quartet would have to be broken up, each of them to spread his wings and fly away on his own account, and poor Trilby to be left behind all by herself. They would even frame little plans whereby she might better herself in life, and avoid the many snares and pitfalls that would beset her lonely path in the quartier latin when they were gone.

Trilby never thought of such things as these; she took short views of life, and troubled herself about no morrows.

There was, however, one jarring figure in her little fool's paradise, a baleful and most ominous figure that constantly crossed her path, and came between her and the sun, and threw its shadow over her, and that was Svengali.

He also was a frequent visitor at the studio in the Place St. Anatole, where much was forgiven him for the sake of his music, especially when he came with Gecko and they made music together. But it soon became apparent that they did not come there to play to the three Angliches; it was to see Trilby, whom they both had taken it into their heads to adore, each in a different fashion:

Gecko, with a humble, doglike worship that expressed itself in mute, pathetic deference and looks of lowly self-depreciation, of apology for his own unworthy existence, as though the only requital he would ever dare to dream of were a word of decent politeness, a glance of tolerance or good-will—a mere bone to a dog.

(To be continued)

She "made the soft eyes" at all three indiscriminately.
(Philo McCullough as Taffy, Andree Lafayette as Trilby and Creighton Hale as Little Billee.)

SUNDAY SERVICES AT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH EPOCHAL

The Sunday services at the Glendale Presbyterian church marked an epoch in the history of the congregation. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed during the morning service. The largest number of new members received for many months was publicly welcomed into the membership. The audience present taxed the capacity of every nook and corner of the auditorium. Numbers of visitors from Los Angeles and other Southern California cities were present, among whom were numerous former members of the congregation.

At the evening service the pastor, Rev. W. E. Edmonds, preached an evangelistic message using as his subject, "The Closed Door." He made a touching appeal to all to enter before the door is finally closed. At the close of his message a considerable number accepted the invitation and accepted Jesus Christ as their Saviour. In the after service many took part, among whom was Rev. Millikan, the pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, which will hereafter use the church building as their place of worship.

During the day many expressions relating to the past history of the congregation were heard, but these were largely overwhelmed by the hopes expressed with reference to the larger opportunities awaiting the congregation in the new edifice at the corner of Louise and Harvard streets.

All the services of the day were peculiarly impressive and dignified. A deep spiritual atmosphere pervaded both the morning and evening audiences and the hope was expressed again and again in both conversation and prayer that the atmosphere of the old church might be carried over into the new. Mingled feelings of sorrow and gladness filled the hearts of the people. The loyalty of the people and their spirit of unity takes them into the new building in a spirit of beautiful harmony.

The prayer meeting this week will be held in the new church. The Sunday morning services will be held in the Glendale theater and the Sunday evening services will be on the first floor of the new church until the auditorium is ready for occupancy, which will be in November.

LIBRARY OFFERS SATISFACTION TO LOVERS OF BOOKS

Book lovers are taking more and more satisfaction in the Glendale library, which is making systematic additions of new contributions to literature of a serious character as well as the lighter fiction which is so much in demand.

One volume likely to be of special interest to those who aspire to write fiction, whether it is to appear between the covers of a book or on the movie stage, is entitled "The Art of Inventing Characters" and is by George Polti, a Frenchman, author of "Thirty-six Dramatic Situations." It has been translated into English by Lucile Ray and is an elaboration of the earlier book. For the most part it is an analysis of the elements of human personality and an elucidation of the principles by which these elements may be combined to produce new types in endless variety. In other words it describes the method by which human combinations may be effected and the results forecasted with as great probability as the productions made by chemists of the reactions of the elements they bring together.

Another book which has been needed is a work on "Modern American Poetry," a comprehensive assembling of the best modern verse by such poets as Emily Dickinson, Lanier, Aldrich, Harte, Field, Riley, Dunbar, Markham, Hovey, Carmen, Masters, Frost, Sandberg, Amy Lowell, Lindsay and others.

A typical volume by Irvin Cobb entitled "The Snake Doctor" abounds in dramatic situations, humor and human interest.

"Telling Fortunes by Tea-leaves" will be likely to standardize a delightful art. It explains Miss Cicely Kent's method.

In "A Calm Review of a Calm Man" Samuel G. Blythe pays his tribute to President Warren G. Harding.

Another book which will help the creators of fiction is Arthur Sullivant - Hoffman's "Fundamentals of Fiction." Its author explains that it aims directly at faults which are the chief cause of the rejection of manuscripts by magazine editors and book publishers.

"Suzanne and the Pacific" is a very fitting contribution to the world of fiction at this time since it is about a female Robinson Crusoe and it is time we had one. It tells the adventures of a modern girl from a conventional French family who was shipwrecked and stranded for five years alone on a coral island of the Pacific. It is by Jean Giraudeaux and was translated by Ben Ray Redman.

Deaths and Funerals

MRS. FRANK HERRON

Mrs. Frank Herron, who for a number of years resided on Vine street, Glendale, passed away this morning, October 2, 1923, at her home in Long Beach after a long illness. She leaves a husband and two children. Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon at the undertaking parlors at Sixth and Locust avenue, Long Beach.

JAMES E. JONES

Funeral services for James E. Jones who passed away at the family home at 615 Orange Grove avenue on Sunday, September 30, 1923, will be held at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the parlors of the Jewel City Undertaking company. Reverend Clifford Cole will officiate.

The deceased was a member of Perry Lodge No. 78, A. F. & A. M., of Perry, Oklahoma, for thirteen years. He was also a member of Perry Chapter No. 87, Order of the Eastern Star. Unity Lodge No. 368, A. F. & A. M., of Glendale, will have charge of the services at Grand View Memorial park.

Betterment of Cities Parley in Atlanta, Georgia

[By Associated Press]

ATLANTA, Oct. 2.—A study of the engineering aspects of the water-power projects at Tallulah Falls, Ga., near this city, is expected to be made by visitors to the annual convention of the American Society for Municipal Improvements to be held here November 12 to 16. The falls, one of the state's beauty spots, was harnessed several years ago and now furnishes hydro-electric power for the industries of this section.

The reading of papers, and general discussions of subjects relating to engineering, city zoning, transportation, sanitation and municipal improvements will take up most of the time of the meeting. The society has a membership of between 1,500 and 2,000, composed largely of engineers, contractors, city and county officials and supply men. It has never met twice in the same city, the purpose of the society, according to its officials, being to disseminate by personal contact, as well as by publication, information and experiences upon the best methods to be employed in the management of the municipal departments and construction of municipal works.

All of the officers of the organization, including W. W. Horner of St. Louis, president, are expected to be in attendance.

A lecturer gave a learned and interesting address before a woman's club on "The Decadence of Pure English."

At the close of the talk an over-dressed woman approached him and said:

"I did enjoy your talk ever so much, and I agree with you that the English language is decading something awful. Hardly no one talks proper nowadays, and goodness only knows what the next generation will talk like if nothing ain't done about it."

SIXTY-FOUR PER CENT DIE PENNILESS, SURVEY SHOWS

S. W. STRAUSS,
President American Society for Thrift.

S. W. STRAUS

OUT of 100 average white male adults, nine leave estates which will produce $50 a month or more at 6 per cent net; 27 leave estates which will produce an average of $20 a month at 6 per cent net, and 64 leave little or nothing.

These figures were obtained as the result of a survey made by Mr. Joseph J. Devney, economist and author of "Devney's Economic Table," among 20,000 adults throughout the United States.

Similar investigations have been made in this country from time to time, and all have resulted in about the same general indications. Statistics, of course, have varied at different periods and in different parts of the country, but they have never varied on the one outstanding point that the closing years of the lives of many of our citizens finds them more or less dependent on others for financial succor.

These facts should serve the purpose of a timely warning to the millions of Americans who today are in the full enjoyment of health and prosperity.

The rules of life do not vary greatly. The 64 adults referred to in Mr. Devney's report were no less prosperous than 64 out of 100 average men today.

This is the thought that no individual can escape.

It is true that more and more our people are appreciating the value of thrift; savings are growing in our banks; our list of home owners is increasing; thrift is rapidly finding its way into the curricula of our schools.

But the actual conditions show that all too few of our people are able to hold onto the wealth they have helped to create.

It becomes a matter for each individual to study closely the situation that confronts him personally.

While you are able to earn and save, do so.

Make the resolve that, under no circumstances whatever, will you ever become one of the 64 out of every 100 who leave little or nothing to show for a whole life's work.

Greenwich Village Figures in Scenes in "She Loves and Lies"

Many of the scenes in "She Loves and Lies," a Selznick Distributing Corporation revival, starring Norma Talmadge, which is at the Glendale theater again today, were taken in New York's famous Greenwich Village, where the long haired men and short haired women of the artistic world have set up their Bohemian quarter.

Here writers, artists and sculptors have their studios and at night their various haunts tingle with mirth and music. All of this atmosphere has been transferred to the screen in "She Loves and Lies," many of the models and frequenters of the district having been especially engaged for the production. In New York they are known as "nuts" but they take themselves very seriously.

Miss Talmadge appears as a young actress who pretends to be one of these "nuts" in order to carry out her plan to win the man she loves, so that she can reinstate his fallen fortune. She accomplishes her aim in a series of delightful scenes that reveals her in an entirely new light.

Some Glendale people appear in an extra "Letty" at the 9 o'clock show. They are Tom Lingham, his wife (Katherine Goodrich) and George Kunkel.

Moats of Olden Time Figure in "Rupert of Hentzau" at Gateway

A musty old moat, with its forbidding waters and all of its grim and realistic detail, was constructed about the big castle exterior erected for scenes in the Selznick production, "Rupert of Hentzau," which is enjoying such a splendid run at the Gateway theater this week. Moats, which have come down from medieval times and which always form one of the important chapters of novels of castles and European kingdoms, were used in olden days as a protection to keep enemies from entering the castle. The moat consisted of a wide and deep ditch filled with water, and it completely surrounded the castle or fortress. The only egress was over a drawbridge which was raised in times of danger. It was, also, the custom to raise the bridge at night to bar the entrance of midnight intruders.

In Rupert of Hentzau the hero, Rudolph, is forced to swim the moat under the cover of darkness, and climb the castle wall in order to aid the queen who is inside the castle. This is one of the many compelling incidents in Anthony Hope's novel, and the director has succeeded admirably in getting the author's spirit of adventure into the scenes. Taking part in these scenes are Elaine Hammerstein, Bert Lytell, Hobart Bosworth, Bryant Washburn and Adophe Menjou.

Charles De Roche in "The Cheat" Is No Man's Successor

Because he resents being called Valentino's successor, Charles de Roche, the brilliant young French-Paramount actor, refused to dance the tango with Pola Negri in the Polish star's second American picture, "The Cheat," which will be on view at the T. D. & L. theater again today.

Instead Miss Negri and the versatile Frenchman danced the more fashionable waltz so popular in the capitals of Europe.

It wasn't that De Roche couldn't dance the tango. Before he made his screen debut he was a professional dancer and the tango was one of his specialties. But ever since he arrived in the United States he has been hailed by the press of the country as the man who is to fill the vacant shoes of Rodolph Valentino.

This De Roche resents. He points out that he won his own spurs in his native country and he doesn't relish being the substitute or successor to anyone. He prefers to be Charles de Roche and stand or fall by that.

ALWAYS WORE RED CARNATION FOR MOTHER

SPOKANE, Wash., Oct. 2 (United Press).—Keeping a promise made to his mother 16 years ago, just before her death, Harry Swift, veteran salesman, never appeared in public without a red carnation in the buttonhole of his coat.

Swift was killed recently in an automobile accident and close friends told of the deathbed vow which he had made, and which caused him to wear at all times a fresh red flower in his lapel.

A FRIEND WENT THEN

Hush! A friend went then.
Went with a tear or sorrow in his eye;
A friend too old to lose, too young to die.
Went at a hasty word of mine and hot.
Grieved in his inner heart and then—was not.
He lives and speaks with me but naught beside.
My friend has died.

Hush! A friend is lost.
A sneer of mine that cost me but a breath,
And fell my friend, sore and wounded, to his death.
Nor made he any cry to tell the pain
He felt—just went and came not back again.
And though today again our pathways crossed,
My friend is lost.

Hush! A friend was slain
Just then—struck down in the broad light of day,
As fell a crime I know as ever lay
At murder's door—it cost me but a jeer
At him who craved for sympathy—a tear
I shed and bid him come to me in vain,
My friend is slain!
